

BOMBINGS LINKED TO BLACK LEGION

Boss of Uncle Sam's G-Men

Here is a new portrait of J. Edgar Hoover, boss of Uncle Sam's G-Men, who has successfully placed sleuthing on a mass production basis as head of the Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation. He is an incorruptible zealot for law, order, and the right. He is the chief reason why the "cops" side is getting more popular when the kids play "cops and robbers." His aim is to erase the 'glamour' that has been woven about our American gangsters. Perhaps you've noticed that he has been doing a pretty good job of it recently.

BANKRUPT ACT EDICT MUDDLES WATER SET-UPS

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—(UP)—Confusion today cloaked the financial future of almost a score of California irrigation projects affected by the United States supreme court decision yesterday holding the municipal bankruptcy act of 1934 unconstitutional.

Two questions were raised. They are:

1. What will be the ultimate settlement of refinancing sought by 15 districts under the now invalidated federal law and pending?
2. Will creditors of districts already financed under the law be able to recover their asserted losses?

The answers, according to irrigation experts, are of vital importance not only to the creditors but to agriculturists whose margin of profit is finely balanced on the cost of water and taxes.

The supreme court decision was received with varied comment.

W. Colburn Cook, Turlock attorney and expert in irrigation bond litigation involving $50,000,000, at Sacramento said:

"The people again will have faith in the integrity of irrigation bonds."

Stephen Downey, attorney for the Merced irrigation district, commented:

"No district has been able to bring in all of its bonds for conversion into RFC bonds. As a result..."

CALL ON PRESIDENT FOR TAX PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(UP)—President Roosevelt was called upon today in a final effort by senate finance committee members to whip into shape the administration's tax bill.

At the request of Chairman Pat Harrison of the finance committee, Mr. Roosevelt agreed to meet with Democratic members of the committee tonight at 8 p. m., at the White House.

It was expected that the committee's draft of the complex and much-revised bill would be submitted for Mr. Roosevelt's approval. Final details were being ironed out by the committee today in a last effort to bring the revenue yield of the measure up to the president's requirements.

If the bill is found to be satisfactory to Mr. Roosevelt tonight, it was thought that swift senate passage would be attempted.

Fire Sweeps San Francisco Water Front

HARBOR LOSS IS ESTIMATED AT $200,000

City's Worst Blaze in 3 Years Spreads Over Half-Mile Area

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—(UP)—San Francisco's worst fire in three years broke out in the city's inner harbor today.

Fanned by a strong east wind, it spread with lightning speed over a half-mile front, consuming thousands of dollars worth of lumber and destroying the Southern Pacific trestle over Seventh and Channel streets, disrupting rail traffic into the city.

Flames, carried on the surface of the Third street channel by blazing oil, raced from Seventh and Channel streets, to Third street.

Damage from the fire, which was visible for miles around and which more than 100 firemen fought for three hours before getting it under control, will run over $200,000, Fire Chief Charles Brennan estimated.

Spectator Falls Dead

An unidentified spectator, about 55, died presumably from heart attack while watching the blaze from Berry and Fourth streets. Several firemen were injured.

Thousands of commuters from the San Francisco peninsula were forced to leave their trains south of the fire, and make their way several miles uptown through the flame-swept area because of the destroyed trestle.

Seven ships, two of them large vessels laden with lumber, trapped in the flames, were cut adrift in the channel during the height of the blaze. Four scows, five launches and a number of smaller boats fled down the channel as the wall of flame threatened to cut off escape.

Fireman Charles Rockwell, 25, engine company 9, and Fireman Ward Alvine, 43, engine No. 1, were the most seriously injured. They will recover, however, emergency hospital physicians said.

High pressure lines shot millions of cubic feet of water along the entire front with fireboats augmenting the more than 30 pieces of apparatus rushed to the scene from uptown stations.

Starts in Sewer

The blaze started in the Channel street sewer which empties into the channel underneath the Southern Pacific trestle at that point.

Eating quickly along the edge of oil-soaked pilings, the flames reached the south bank, then fanned by a brisk wind from the east swept through dry grass to the Acme Lumber company.

Girl Testifies in Morals Trial

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(UP)—In a dramatic appearance on the witness stand, Lois Wright, pretty 21-year-old brunette, tearfully told a story of her love affair with Robert S. James, her dapper uncle, who is on trial on a morals count as a prelude to a pending trial for alleged wife murder.

The girl's testimony covered three years of alleged association with her uncle—a period interrupted only by a few months when James was married to Mary Busch James, his fifth wife, for whose death by rattlesnake poison and drowning, he and Charles Hope, a former sailor, are to be tried shortly.

Miss Wright was dressed entirely in gray except for a lavender blouse as she told her story. She clenched her hands in her lap as she talked and turned her head slightly to avoid the stares of men and women who packed the courtroom while other hundreds in corridors outside clamored for admittance.

Man, Believed Suicide For Eight Years, Is Jailed in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(UP)—Believed a suicide for years after jumping off a Long Island Sound steamer, Donald Cirkot was in jail here today awaiting return to Yonkers, N. Y., to face eight-year-old charges of misappropriating $12,000 from the Grassy Springs Golf club.

The 40-year-old auditor, arrested last night at the Sawtelle Soldiers Home, where he was working as orderly, confessed the theft, according to police, and told of his thwarted suicide attempt that effectively hid him for years.

"I left a note at the club explaining everything and went out in a steamer in the sound," he related. "I jumped off and was drowning. Then a fellow came along in a rowboat. That was the

5 CCC Workers Die As Forest Fire Eats Through Jersey Bog

TUCKERTON, N. J., May 26.—(UP)—A forest fire which burned five men to death and ravaged 50,000 acres of cranberry bog and shrub timber land was burning itself out today.

Unless wind arises and whips the dwindling flames over fire lines hastily dug up by 2,000 men who battled the fire for 24 hours, danger of additional damage appears remote.

A half dozen fires smoldered in five southern New Jersey counties.

PENSION PROBE JOLTED AGAIN WITH DEFIANCE

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(UP)—The Townsend revolt against the house old age pension investigating committee spread today to subordinates of Dr. Francis E. Townsend when two of his lieutenants failed to appear in answer to a subpoena.

John B. Kiefer, Chicago, and the Rev. Clinton L. Wunder, New York, both members of the directorate of the Old Age Revolving Pension, Ltd., followed their leader today in his dramatic defiance of the congressional committee.

As a result the score stands at three to nothing in favor of the Townsends.

The committee was thrown into a quandary by the Townsend challenge and stalled for time again today. An executive session was called at which it was decided to again delay decision whether to cite Dr. Townsend for contempt.

Chairman C. Jaber Bell, D. Mo., decided to resume general hearings after the decision to delay action on possible contempt proceedings and called Kiefer and the Rev. Wunder. Neither appeared.

Committee Counsel James E. Sullivan, said the Rev. Wunder telegraphed the committee Saturday he would be here today.

When he failed to appear Chairman Bell put Rep. John Steven McGroarty, D. Calif., former head of the house Townsend bloc, on the stand. McGroarty split with Dr. Townsend several months ago when the aged physician advocated a third party movement.

Bell asked McGroarty, who identified himself as a lawyer and newspaperman, whether it was his first term in congress.

"It is my first and I trust my last term in congress," the elderly McGroarty replied.

McGroarty explained he had introduced two bills, which had approval of the Townsend movement. The one, which was revised and is now pending, provides pensions ranging from $50 to $200 per month for persons over 60.

McGroarty said Townsend leaders referred to the measure frequently as the "official" bill and speakers at Townsend meetings represented the bill as raising minimum pensions of $200 a month.

Japanese Speed Troops to China

TIENSIN, China, May 26.—(UP)—Four Japanese army transports laden with infantry and cavalry are on their way to northern China, it was announced officially today.

The transports are due at Tangku, on the coast, Friday and the troops will arrive here Friday night.

They will be quartered at the gigantic new Japanese military airbase and barracks which is nearing completion on the Hopai plain three miles from Tientsin, capable of quartering 15,000 men.

It is said that the men enroute are the final contingent of the new troops intended for the Japanese army in northern China.

British Actions Anger Italians

ROME, May 26.—(UP)—War talk was renewed today while Emperor Haile Selassie approached Gibraltar in a British warship on his way to London.

Mounting anger seemed to point clearly to a new period of dangerous tension. Great Britain was spotlighted once more as pursuing policies inimical to Italy.

Anger was expressed not only because Britain put a cruiser at the disposal of the emperor—called here "Signor Tafari"—but at the prospect, which Italians regard as a certainty, that with his arrival London will become a focal point for a campaign of anti-Italian propaganda.

LATE FLASHES

NEW YORK, May 26.—(UP)—Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, queen of the tennis courts, announced today she will not go abroad this year to compete in the Wimbledon tennis championships or play with the United States in the Wightman Cup matches.

NEW YORK, May 26.—(UP)—California's Golden Bears, Poughkeepsie winners in 1932, 1934 and 1935, today drew the favored venue for this year's four-mile variety crew race, to be held June 22.

Co-operation of the internationally famous beauty, Pia Ferrari Davico (below) with a noted yachtman, the Prince of Monaco and the police of London, Paris and New York, led to arrests of suspects in a $2,000,000 stolen bond ring and the recovery of $440,000 of the loot. Detective Henry P. Oswald of New York, whose unremitting attention to the case developed the clues that brought about the arrests, has sailed for Europe to question prisoners.

MILLION AND HALF TAX MONEY IS DISTRIBUTED

APPORTIONMENT of $1,652,788.60 of taxes to county departments, special districts, road districts, bond retirement funds and high school and elementary school districts, representing the second allotment of collections made by County Tax Collector John C. Lamb, was announced today by County Auditor W. T. Lambert.

The sums segregated by Lambert include $1,313,230.79 to general government and districts, and $339,557.81 to the cities of Santa Ana, Fullerton and Laguna Beach, for which the county collects taxes.

The three cities received the following checks: Fullerton, general fund, $59,818.57; Fullerton, weeds, $314.54; Laguna Beach, general, $17,816.37; Laguna Beach, streets, $732.71; Laguna Beach acquisition and improvement, $134.39; Laguna Beach municipal improvement district, $278.50; Santa Ana, general, $133,158.41; Santa Ana, streets, $49,102.43; Santa Ana, weeds, $599.57; and Santa Ana, acquisition and improvement, $19,273.72.

Segregations for Metropolitan Water District payments: Santa Ana, $17,100.75; Anaheim, $5317.36; and Fullerton, $9157.03. To the Laguna Beach county water district, $15,589.26; to South Coast county water district at South Laguna, $884.

"Annie Laurie" Of Hearst Papers Dies

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—(UP)—Newspaper workers of the west coast today mourned Mrs. W. E. Bonfile, 73, known to readers of the W. R. Hearst chain as "Annie Laurie," who died last night at her home here after a long illness.

She was born in Chilton, Wis., the daughter of the late General Benjamin Sweet.

Youth Changes Story And Says Never Saw Accused Wife-Slayer

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(UP)—James Fagan Culver, Kentucky transient, upset the prosecution of Samuel T. Whittaker on charges of wife murder today by reneging upon his asserted promise to turn state's evidence, and, instead, testifying had never seen Whittaker before.

Culver, according to police, previously had confessed he staged a faked holdup in which the elderly organist's wife was shot. The youth pleaded guilty to second degree murder.

"Don't you remember Mr. Whittaker—the man sitting at the counsel table?" demanded amazed Deputy District Attorney U. U. Blacklock.

Culver looked closely at the bald, stooped organist whom he had confronted, face to face, numerous times while his purported confession was being checked.

He smirked and replied: "Well, I think I have seen him before, but I am in such a nervous and upset condition that I don't remember nothing."

BURNING OF SHRINE ALSO INVESTIGATED

N. Y. Congressman Demands Action Against Robed Vigilantes

DETROIT, May 26.—(UP)—Bomblings and arson were charged against the Black Legion today as plans were forwarded to subject the hooded and robed vigilante organization to state-wide grand jury investigation.

The burning of Father Charles E. Coughlin's original Shrine of the Little Flower last March 17 is being investigated as a possible terrorist activity of the Black Legion in its fight against Catholicism, Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea told the United Press today.

"The burning of Father Coughlin's shrine is a definite part of our investigation," McCrea said. "We have not, as yet, found anything definite to connect the fire with the Legion, but we are pursuing our inquiry in that direction."

The original shrine, a one story wooden structure where the famed radio priest gained international fame, was destroyed early St. Patrick's day. Loss was estimated at $20,000, but Father Coughlin characterized its "intrinsic value as irreparable."

Findings Kept Secret

At the time, the priest and Royal Oak fire officials said the blaze resulted from defective wiring.

What his investigators had turned up concerning the shrine fire, McCrea did not disclose.

While the Detroit inquiry turned into this channel, the grand jury investigation at Jackson, seat of the state prison for southern Michigan, resulted in the issuance of warrants against four men on charges of kidnaping and assaulting a WPA worker.

Warden Harry Jackson, of the prison, announced the dismissal of two more guards as a consequence of the investigation, which brought to a total of four the number who have lost their posts through alleged Black Legion activities.

McCrea's ace investigator, Harry Colburn, raided five homes and stores in suburban Detroit and uncovered what he said was definite proof of an existence of a chapter of the subversive band in that city. Numerous guns and revolvers, ammunition, and literature pertaining to race conditions in the schools were found.

Find Oil On City Land In Pasadena

PASADENA, May 26.—(UP)—This city went into the oil business today when a 1700-barrel a day well came in on municipal water department land.

A drill struck oil at 3000 feet at the San Gabriel reservoir near the Montebello oil field. It was also flowing gas at the rate of 1,500,000 cubic feet a day. The city gets one-eighth of the royalties under a contract with an oil company.

suit of the court's action the holders now may demand 100 per cent on their bonds. It is evident that they will not get it when other holders have agreed to turn in the bonds for a percentage.

Prior to enactment of the law, political subdivisions were not concerned with the bankruptcy act. The 1934 law opened the way for that method of refinancing.

The law was designed to place political sub-division refinancing under federal jurisdiction. It provided a means for a sub-division to go into federal court as a bankrupt and force all bondholders to accept a reorganization plan approved by two-thirds.

Funds for the refinancing were provided by the reconstruction finance corporation. Creditors opposing the refinancing plans, if they numbered less than one-third, were required to accept the plan.

In the instance of the Merced irrigation district refinancing, most prominent of California irrigation political sub-divisions reorganized under the new federal law, the RFC paid off about 90 per cent of the bondholders at the rate of 55 cents on the dollar.

Ten per cent of the Merced district bondholders refused to accept the settlement offer. Whether that reluctant group now will be able to recover a 100 per cent value of their holdings is a question raised.

The districts whose refinancing under the law had not been completed when the statute was outlawed now have no means of settling their bankruptcy. It was held. Representatives said the decision would have an adverse effect on farmers heavily burdened with tax assessments.

Districts which had "readjustment" petitions filed under the law were: Santa-Carolina, East Contra Costa, El Dorado, Lindsay-Strathmore, Imperial, Lindsay-Wyandotte, Oakdale, Paradise, Palmdale, Pescadero, San Diego, Santa Fe, South San Joaquin, Vista and Waterford.

The supreme court's decision was given as the result of an attack by bondholders of Cameron county, Texas, drainage district No. 1. Justice James C. McReynolds, writing the majority opinion of the 5-4 decision, held the law infringed constitutional provisions against impairment of contractual obligations and that it led to direct control of state affairs and their subdivisions by congress.

California has a pertinent part in the court's decision. The leading plaintiff in the successful legal test was the West Coast Life Insurance company, owner of a block of Texas drainage bonds. Two of the plaintiff bondholders were A. G. Griffin and C. W. Griffin, directors of the California Packing corporation. A brief attacking the act was filed with the supreme court by Cook, Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison, San Francisco attorneys, also filed an attacking brief.

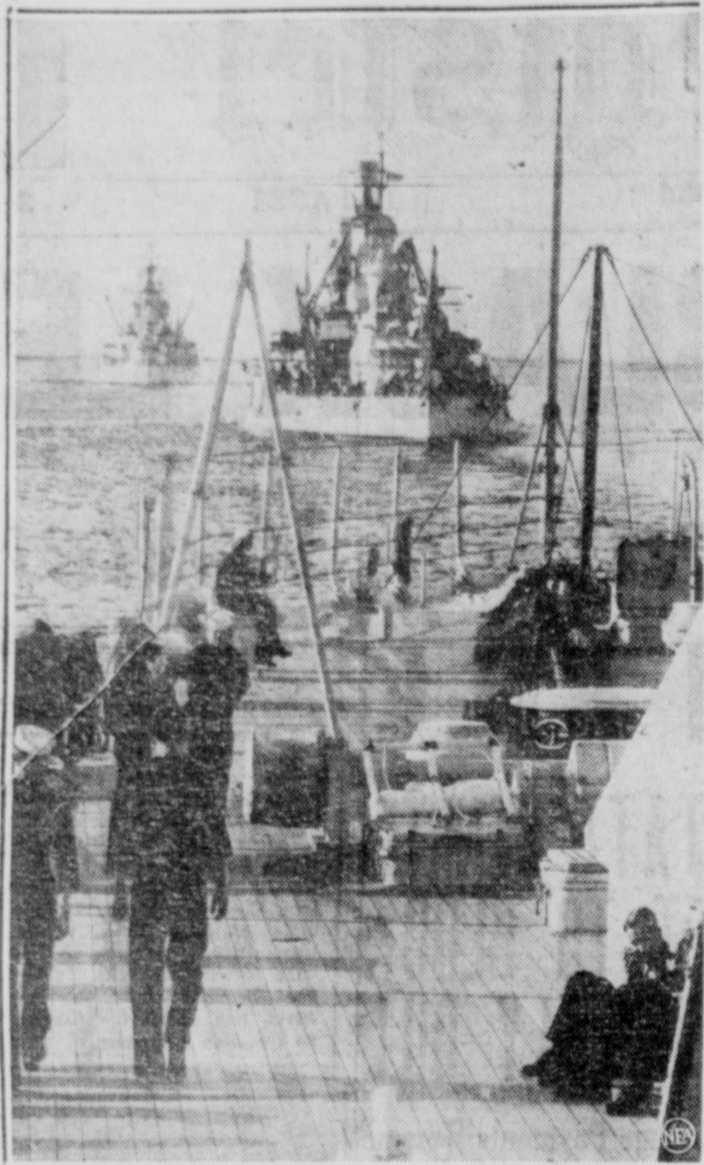

Circle Members Guests At Beach

GARDEN GROVE, May 26. — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rogers entertained members of Circle No. 3 of the Woman's Aid of the First Methodist church and their families at their beach cottage at Laguna Beach recently. A part of the group enjoyed beach sports while others spent the time sewing and chatting. The covered dish dinner was planned by Mrs. S. C. Oertly.

Present were the Rev. and Mrs. Grover Ralston and daughter, Elva; the Rev. and Mrs. T. S. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Schuriger and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Blaicholder and daughter, Evelyn; Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Oertly, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Schnitzer, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Harper and son, Leland; Mrs. W. W. Dungan and daughter, Juanita; Mrs. G. R. Reyburn, Mrs. Helen Barnes, Miss Velda Barnes, Miss Hannah Mae Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rogers.

The salmon and the eel both belong to the fish family, yet, at spawning time, the salmon travels thousands of miles to reach fresh water, and the eel travels thousands of miles to reach the ocean.

troyed a farm house. They believed it possibly was connected with the Black Legion's night riders.

At Lansing, Attorney General David H. Crowley prepared to hold a grand jury investigation in every county of the state where the Black Legion is known to have operated.

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald ordered that every state worker proved to be a legionnaire be summarily dismissed.

The Detroit Times, Hearst evening newspaper, reported it had found an application blank signed with the name of Prosecutor McCrea in the files of the organization. McCrea, smiling, said the signature on the card looked like his, but denied "I have ever been a member."

NEW YORK CONGRESSMAN DEMANDS FEDERAL PROBE

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(UP)—Chairman Samuel Dickstein, D. N. Y., of the house immigration committee, today demanded investigation by the justice and post office departments of reports that a band of "terrorists" is seeking to "destroy" Jews and Catholics.

Dickstein said that if Postmaster General James A. Farley and Director J. Edgar Hoover of the federal bureau of investigation are unable to take proper steps, he will appeal for congressional action.

Meanwhile Rep. Charles Kramer, D. Cal., charged that the mails were being used to distribute propaganda to foment "anti-Jewish" hatred and said he also had complained to the postoffice department.

Kramer said most of the literature which he wanted investigated was mailed from the Pacific coast.

"There is a group of terrorists seeking to destroy Jews and Catholics in this country," Dickstein wrote the justice department. "The mails are being used to foment racial and religious prejudices."

send advocating its approval to congressmen.

"Then you are reasonably satisfied if Dr. Townsend had made any serious effort to get the bill passed, you would have known about it?" Bell asked.

"Yes, sir."

Bell questioned McGroarty as to his knowledge of efforts by Townsend leaders to raise $11,000 in addition to a collected $25,000 fund for congressional action. Previous testimony developed that the $11,000 was raised in what Sullivan termed a manner of using the mails to defraud since the congressional action committee had been disbanded when the appeal was sent out.

McGroarty said he had no knowledge of the financial affairs of the Townsend movement.

"I never got a penny out of the movement during my entire connection with it," McGroarty said.

McGroarty said he was convinced Townsend had abandoned the McGroarty bill as a result of Townsend's insistence that the $200 a month pension still was the objective of the Townsend movement.

McGroarty estimated a one per cent transaction tax such as he advocated would pay about $60 per month to 6,000,000 pensioners. McGroarty said he still was pushing the bill.

"It's my baby and I haven't abandoned it," he said.

The witness said claims had been made by Townsend and others in the movement that McGroarty's bill would produce the pension of $200 a month.

"Those claims are utterly without foundation and I regret that the statements were made. I never made any such claim," he said.

The witness professed ignorance of Townsend's testimony before the committee that the pension plan founder would modify the McGroarty bill to make all persons who reached the age limit eligible. McGroarty said he intended it to apply only to persons with incomes of less than $2500 annually who withdrew completely from "economic competition with their fellow citizens."

Asked if he would be willing to be associated with present Townsend directors, McGroarty said: "Exercising my right as a free born American citizen I would not care to be associated with them."

"I don't know how John Bull challenged his opponents to a duel in the past, but in this case, it seems as though he's planning to slap Mussolini in the face with a wet sunction."

Regardless of the ravings of diplomats, England is lucky to have a King who had far too many tails, in his youth, to risk riding with those mad Four Horsemen.

It would be strange indeed, if two of the greatest Christian nations should deliberately select the land of the Bible as a place to break most of the Ten Commandments.

$200,000 FIRE HITS DOCKS AT SAN FRANCISCO

lapsing prevented the first commuters from reaching the city, but J.J. Jordan, Southern Pacific Coast division superintendent, announced later trains were routed over the track on the far-east side which he said was on a concrete base.

A second trestle underneath the first one, coupled with the big wooden sewer, making the heart of the fire a solid mass of oil-soaked piling, handicapped firemen and diggers alike.

The holes created a forced draft, driving the flames back to the front or west side and firemen were later to enter through the top and fight the fire at close range.

Fire Chief Brennan said the entire dock from Seventh street along the channel will have to be rebuilt.

City and Southern Pacific officials began an investigation of the cause of the fire.

Belief that the blaze may have started from oil which was dumped in a sewer prompted city officials to reveal that a 1929 ordinance specifically makes it a misdemeanor to pour gas, oil or any petroleum by-product in a sewer.

The penalty is $500 fine or six months in jail. The ordinance further provides that such fluids shall not be dumped on any waters in San Francisco. A federal regulation prohibits dumping of such material on waterways. City Attorney John J. O'Toole said.

Legion Community For Costa Mesa Given Approval

Application to WPA for construction of the proposed Legion Community hall at Costa Mesa, to cost $21,592, was authorized today by the county supervisors.

The project application calls for $13,918 in federal funds and $7674 as the sponsor's contribution.

The supervisors today instructed Chairman John Mitchell to make application to the War department for a permit to rebuild the bridge connecting Harbor island with the mainland at Newport bay.

Relocation of the road forced by the bridge, which is owned by Joseph Beck and Louis Briggs, of Balboa. Since individuals could not apply to the War department for the permit, arrangements were made for the county to make the application, the private owners to pay the cost and guarantee the county against any cost or damage.

Accused As "Black Legion Executioners"

Finding of the bullet-riddled body of Charles A. Pools, 32, WPA worker in a ditch near Detroit, led to a sweeping investigation which bare activities of the Black Legion. Alleged to be patterned after the Ku Klux Klan, members are declared to have worn hoods and gowns as shown at right, a police officer posing in the robes. Beside him are weapons authorities say they took from Black Legion members. At top are shown four of the alleged leaders, said to have admitted aiding in the killing of Pools. Left to right are Dayton Dean, Harvey Davis, "colonel" in the organization; Urban Lipps, and Irvin Lee. The legion membership form is said to state that its aim is to "uphold Protestantism and combat Communism," while waging a "moral crusade."

PROWLER STILL BEING HUNTED BY S. A. POLICE

City police were still on the lookout today for a would-be burglar who entered the home of the Elwood Bears, 520 West Nineteenth street, early Sunday morning and, after threatening Mrs. Bear, ran and escaped as she called for help.

Dr. Claude E. Olewiler of 827 West Nineteenth street, reported that the prowler apparently used an automobile in making good his escape. Upon hearing the call for help, Dr. Olewiler came from his home, opposite the Bear residence to lend assistance. He reported he heard the man leave in a car which had been parked beside the Bear residence.

Elwood Bear, well-known Orange county violin teacher, has his headquarters at 208 South Sycamore street, Santa Ana, where he instructs a large group of pupils daily. He is conductor of the Santa Ana Symphony orchestra; associate conductor of Orange County Federal Symphony orchestra, and director of various classes of string and violin ensemble groups.

"And, by-the-by, you might tell my friends here, that I accredit my excellent health to regular exercises, especially swimming, and not to sleeping out-of-doors or chasing burglars," Mr. Bear said today. "I sleep out-of-doors only because I enjoy it."

PIXLEY QUALIFIES FOR 500-MILE RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, May 26.—(UP)—Four vacancies remained in the starting lineup for the Memorial Day speedway race as prospective entries resumed test trials today.

Five other drivers have entered, but their mounts were not believed fast enough to win a place among the 32 starters.

Four drivers braved a treacherous wind to qualify Monday. They were Harry MacQuinn, Indianapolis, who averaged 114.119 miles per hour over the 25-mile test run; "Deacon" Litz, Dubois, Pa., who averaged 115.997; Ray Pixley, Fullerton, Cal., 116.703; and Roy Painter, Detroit 109.867.

G. H. Boardman, manager of the Grand Central market, announced today that contrary to reports and, regardless of what other merchants intend to do, merchants in the Grand Central market will remain closed all day Saturday, in observance of Memorial day.

BOXER TO MARRY GIRL INSTEAD OF GOING TO COURT

A little drama, replete with love interest, and entitled "The End of the Boxer's Rebellion" was presented today in Justice Kenneth Morrison's court as Albert Garcia, 21-year-old boxer, of 335 Logan street, Santa Ana, appeared for hearing on an assault and battery complaint.

It seems, according to records of the district attorney's office, that Albert and Rosa were sweethearts and he struck her. At least that's what 18-year-old Rosa Segura of Seventeenth and Whittier streets, Costa Mesa, and Lucy Gutierrez, of the same address, who signed the complaint against Garcia, contended.

But all is well again between Albert and Rosa, who have been sweethearts for a couple of years or so, or at least almost all is well. For, on suggestion of Deputy District Attorney Clarence Sprague the case against Albert was continued until June 1 at 9 a. m.

And wedding bells are about to ring for Albert and Rosa. They're planning to be married before June 1 at 9 a. m.

which includes all graduates as members of the cast, will occupy the remainder of the evening.

Graduates are Jean Vipond, class president; Max Moolick, vice president; Mary Jane Jones, secretary-treasurer; Barbara Kahl, Elaine Terry, Roy Sholz, Setchi Kagawa, Marion Boyd, Benny Bess and Olive Williams.

Workmen from the county road department will go into Bell Canyon, east of San Juan Capistrano tomorrow, and remove Bell Rock, one of the county's historic landmarks, to the Bowers Memorial Museum, in Santa Ana, it was announced today.

The rock, which weighs more than six and one-half tons will be placed in the museum courtyard, along with the Indian Maze rock, brought from the area between Trabuco and Belly canyons and the Indian grinder rock taken from Silverado canyon.

The Bell rock dates back to the early Indian days of the county and it was then that the Indians discovered that the piece of granite gave off a resonant bell-like sound when struck. Because of this rock the canyon was known to Indians and Mexicans as Canada del Campano, or Canyon of the Bell.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The suggestion will be made officially, but the United States now has the nearest thing to an international alliance since 1776.

Nothing has been put on paper, but that means little. Signed agreements do not amount to much in these days of international lawlessness. An exchange of military confidences and a similarity of interests and purposes are far more trustworthy. With such things as the current inside naval relations between the United States and Britain seemingly sealed.

BONDS—

It started back a few years ago when a necessity developed for naval cooperation in the far east. At that time, an entirely unofficial understanding was reached to prevent the American and British fleets from running into each other in the dark on the Pacific.

The men behind the mast here generally know more than they ever did about British naval plans and purposes—and vice versa.

ARRANGEMENTS—

It has never been officially disclosed, but the recent British demand for 25 new destroyers was no surprise here. The British told our delegates at the London naval conference they were going to need more destroyers (and more cruisers) to meet the Italian naval threat in submarines and fast cruisers. United States Ambassador at Large Norman Davis and Admiral Stanley told them privately and informally it was all right with us.

We had our reasons. Our destroyer tonnage is now $9,000 in excess of the old expiring treaty limit. Britain's is 40,000 over. Now, either of us could get around the already obsolete treaty by invoking the escalator clause of the New London agreement, or we could both scrap our excess tonnage one minute before midnight, December 31, and reinstate it one minute later (the old treaty merely promised reduction of destroyer tonnage to 150,000 any time before the treaty expires this year, and nobody has reduced yet).

But use of either of these devices, individually by any one nation would entail serious repercussions. Japan scrapped the old treaty and resisted the new, but she would not overlook any such opportunity to howl. The two major nations, working together, can accomplish a mutually desirable and practical purpose, and not care who howls.

And this is not the only important naval matter upon which Britain the U. S. have worked together lately.

Note—Do not overlook the fact that the new naval bill, now clearing congress, carried funds for 12 new destroyers and six submarines, as well as money for continuing construction of 20 destroyers and four submarines now building.

LUCK

Blue-eyed, blue-shirted Gerald L. K. Smith, Huey Long's picturesque successor as head of the Share-the-Wealth League, recently paid a mysterious visit to the capital.

Mr. Smith told friends that he had two objectives. The first was to unite Townsendites, Coughlinites and share-the-wealthers into an anti-Roosevelt party. The second was to persuade Senator William Edgar Borah to run for the White House as the candidate of all these economic leftists. Reverend Smith conferred with Messrs. Borah and Townsend, but they reached no definite decisions. They agreed in principle, however.

Mr. Smith dropped one secret. It was that if Senator Long had lived, he planned to merge these three groups into a third party, and his political cunning might have effected such an amalgamation. Though Mr. Smith is a vibrant, dynamic political evangelist, he lacks Huey's intuitive grasp of practical politics. More and more it appears that the death of the "Kingfish" was the best break FDR has had since he entered the White House.

CROSSED

William Green's letter assailing the Frazier-Lemke farm re-financing measure has sharpened the strife between him and John Lewis, United Mine president. Many of Green's own followers spatter that he had no right to interfere in a situation involving so many farmers.

What irks Lewis is that he has visualized a Labor Party which shall draw its chief strength from a union of workers and agriculturists. He has constantly preached the doctrine that the farmer and the worker have the same interests and aims. He has emphasized that steady urban wages and fair prices for farm products are twin essentials to recovery.

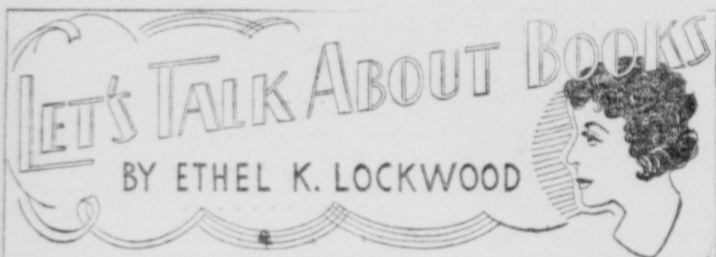

Now comes Mr. Green to alienate agricultural sentiment by attacking a measure for low interest rates on farm mortgages. Mr. Lewis probably thinks as little of the bill as Mr. Green does, but he sees no reason for saying so. It's just another example of the wire-drawing that results from their feud.

TICKET

The Landonites' private poll gives the Kansas governor almost 400 delegates on the first ballot, with 50 necessary to nominate.

If these calculations are correct, it's all over but the shouting. Mr. Landon will go over on the second ballot. His friends expect him to pick up the additional 100-odd from uninstructed delegates or those now pledged to rival candidates like Senator Dickinson, Robert A. Taft or Col. Frank Knox. In fact, Mr. Landon's special messengers are now engaged in gathering pledges that rivals will flop to him provided he shows the first ballot strength predicted. Deals are in the air.

Eastern bosses are still holding out, despite Campaign Manager John Hamilton's pressure. But the tip-off on the Old Guard's weakness is the fact that they're now talking Frank O. Lowden, whose age alone bars him from presidential consideration. Washington wisecracks predict that the ticket will be Landon and Steiwer or Landon and Wadsworth.

CROOK VERSUS COUNTRY

If you like your crook dramas in a bucolic setting, you will find entertainment in the new Bobbs-Merrill book, "Too Good Looking," by Gallet Burgess. But you should be prepared for a rather tedious unfolding of the plot, and too much satire in the names and character-drawing of the country people.

It seemed to me, too, that the author had correlated more "ands" than I ever before encountered between the covers of a book. This may have been deliberate. It does give the story a certain unburied color, characteristic of the locale. But it irritated me, "ands" are necessary—quite true—but when they are thrown in so plentifully the reader becomes conscious of them it's time to delete.

Flossie Cudlick, working for five dollars a week in the household of her uncle and aunt, St. and Min Gammel, is swept off her feet by Varney Todd, the handsome stranger who pops up like a jack-in-the-box on the front porch of the Gammel farmhouse, sweeps the girl into his arms, and throws a very convincing bluff of having met her "somewhere before."

Varney is a quick-witted youth, entirely too good-looking and the reader's. He is probably the most convincing character in the book. Flossie is a bit too good to be true. Suspicious almost from the start that Varney isn't quite what he ought to be, she never-the-less permits herself to fall violently in love with him, pay back the money she believes has been stolen from a nearby store, and in other ways conduct herself like an A-No. 1 nitwit. Despite the emphasis laid upon her as one of the leading characters in the book, she is not sufficiently well-drawn to offer the reader a really clear-cut picture. Her girl friend, Susie Sussling, is a better-drawn type, and one that the reader can visualize without any great difficulty. But ye gods!—what a name! Maybe there is a country community in which all the characters have names like those in the funny papers, but I have stands her in good stead as she takes her place in the hectic world of newspaper making. She learns quickly, her cool, clear head taking her through emotional rapids that might have wrecked a less capable girl. Love comes only to be taken away from her. Tragedy stalks. Yet through it all, Storm clings to the teachings of the old Norwegian, and like a sturdy boat rides the gales of disappointment—and heartbreak.

"Most of us never pick the shore we think we are going to land on," old Svend had said. "God picks it for us, or maybe, He raises the wind that beats against it. So little we have to do with it, and best so, my girl. About all we do is to make the gallant approach."

Always the girl clings to the gallant approach, until at the end contentment comes, and happy, engulping understanding. Love comes again to her—and in Haddock Harbor two gallant young people set about to work out their future—together.

—There is strength in "Gallant!"

Something beyond the mere telling of a story. You will not want to miss reading it.

ENLIGHTENING BOOK

"Mexican Martyrdom," by Wilfred Parsons, released by The Macmillan Company, is a clearly told, dramatic story of what the Catholics have undergone—and are undergoing—in their struggle to cling to the faith of their fathers, in that turbulent country.

It is plain to be seen the book was not written with the idea of stirring up argument, but as a graphic picture of actual conditions. The writing is good. It is interesting, colorful and swift-moving. For the type of book it is, it is particularly well handled; dramatic incidents, each important in itself, have been woven into the whole in such a way as to be a vital part of it. What could have been dull reading because of dull presentation, has been given sufficient life and vividness to make it interesting for anyone.

"Mexican Martyrdom" is not without its light touches, these, however, are more frequent at the beginning of the book, which covers the period before the priests and the people fully realized the disaster that had come upon them.

"Home churches" and "home schools" became the usual thing. How many? Mr. Parsons asserts it would be impossible to know, because discovery meant confiscation of the property. In one district, near San Angel, there were only 27 pupils out of some 300 children attending the public schools. Naturally this aroused suspicion, and home schools were raided. The schools promptly moved out into the public square and defied the government to confiscate that!

Will the "State" in Mexico succeed in ousting the "Church" or submerging it to extinction? It seems highly improbable to the person who has read "Mexican Martyrdom."

INTRODUCE YOUR FAMILY TO GARDEN FRESHNESS

What happens to your foods between the market and your dining table? Do you depend on cold alone? Or do you provide the three other essentials to keep your fruits and vegetables fresh and firm and your meats juicy? What are these important things? First, moist air; second, washed air free from odors; third, circulating air. You get them all only in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, plus constant, uniform cold. Women who study the subject of proper food preservation prefer air-conditioned ice refrigeration because it's safe, natural, silent, inexpensive and dependable. Famous chefs insist on ice refrigeration because their reputations depend on the taste and appearance of their foods at the table. Introduce your family to garden freshness in fruits and vegetables, and to the full flavored richness of juicy meats. Avoid the mess of dampened cloths to keep salads fresh, and the space-wasting inconvenience of covered dishes. The constant freshness of moist, moving air in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator gives you the natural conditions for the correct preservation of foods and food quality.

Four-way Food PROTECTION

1. Correct, uniform temperature.
2. Washed, odorless air.
3. Moist, flavor-saving air.
4. Fresh, circulating air.

Brother of Santa Ana Man is Author of Book On Religion

A survey of the field of modern religion, which seeks to serve the practical interests of religious living and religious teaching, has been published by Dr. Henry N. and Regina Westcott Wieman, under the unnecessarily ponderous title of "A Normative Psychology of Religion."

It has recently been added to the problems of present day life in the Santa Ana Public Library.

The book is of personal interest to Santa Ana readers, in addition to its genuine philosophical concern, for Dr. Henry Nelson Wieman, principal of the Lathrop Evening High School and Regina Westcott Wieman endeavored herself to Parent-Teachers' groups when she lectured here, under the auspices of the Adult Education department, in child psychology.

This volume, the first joint work by the Wiemans, is more than a psychology of religion. It is a survey of the whole field of religion by two specialists in the domain of faith and personality. Dr. Wieman has been an active religious leader, both as a minister and a professor of philosophy, ever since his graduation from college in 1907. He has taught at Occidental College and at the University of Chicago, where he is at present a professor of philosophy. He has lectured frequently on the coast, especially at the Pacific School of Religion and at Cal. Tech. His contribution to this present volume is in the direction of reinterpreting the traditional beliefs and rites of the Christian faith in terms acceptable to the modern mind and yet true to the fundamental human needs which have them.

"Religion," Dr. Wieman writes, "is that which is 'man's' devotion to what he holds supremely 'worthwhile for all human living.' The primary cause of change in belief is not disproving old beliefs. Beliefs change because different problems arise. A different problem means a different question asked, hence a different answer sought. A belief is an answer to a question."

The contribution most easily attributed to Mrs. Wieman is in the field of psychological development and religious education. "Progressive integration of the personality" is the subject sought in religious and educational development by modern psychologists, and Mrs. Wieman traces with imagination and care the gradual, evolutionary development of the faculties of mind and heart in the growing child. For each stage of development a different and an enlarging spiritual experience is possible, grading from the perfect self-absorption of the nursing infant to the complete self-dedication, through socially useful and efficient service, of the mature adult.

Each stage is natural, and, when there is no fixation and no reversion, each stage is "religious." When these disorders creep in there are psychotherapy and Religious Counseling to employ, and a chapter is devoted to the techniques and purposes of each of these ameliorative devices.

The application of religion to

"GAY DECEPTION" OPENS TOMORROW

The escapades of two light-hearted young people who are seeking adventure in a big hotel and who find romance together are delightfully portrayed in "The Gay Deception," according to Vic Walker, manager of Walker's State theater where this film opens a two day showing tomorrow. The second feature on the program is "Personal Maid's Secret," a comedy-drama with Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull and Ruth Donnelly in the leading roles. The story concerns the struggles of a New York family to get ahead.

"The Bride Comes Home," with Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray, and "Miss Pacific Fleet," with Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert and Allen Jenkins, show for the last times on tonight's program.

Inquest in the traffic death of Casme Alvarez, 30, of 1119 Swan street, Anaheim, who was run down by an automobile about 1:30 a. m. Sunday on Lincoln boulevard, half a mile west of Cypress, is scheduled for 3 p. m. tomorrow at Backs, Terry and Campbell funeral chapel in Anaheim.

Noriyn Dull, 25, of Route 1, Buena Park, whose car struck Alvarez, declared the victim was walking in the right traffic lane beside J. Olvera, 1139 Perry street, Anaheim, at the time of the accident, and was unseen because of the dark clothing he wore, until the Dull car was almost upon him. Dull, who said he swerved his car in an effort to avoid striking the man, added that Alvarez was walking "about in the center of the traffic lane." Alvarez' death was the twenty-fourth in Orange county this year as result of traffic accidents.

S. A. PHYSICIANS AT CORONADO FOR CONCLAVE

Many Santa Ana physicians are in attendance this week at the annual convention of California Medical association now in session in Hotel del Coronado, where official delegates from Orange County Medical association are Drs. Dexter R. Ball and Harry G. Huffmann of this city, and G. Wendell Olson of Fullerton.

Dr. and Mrs. Huffman, 2340 Riverside Drive, spent yesterday at Coronado, and will be present again tomorrow when the final session of delegates will be held, and where Dr. Ball and Dr. Olson also expect to be in attendance.

Earlier plans for Dr. and Mrs. Dexter R. Ball and Dr. and Mrs. Huffman to be present for the entire session were canceled because of the illness of the little son of the Ball home, 2419 Bonnie Brae.

Dr. John Ball, president of Orange County Medical association, left early this morning to be in attendance, while Dr. J. L. Maroon of this city and Dr. Herbert A. Johnston of Anaheim, went down yesterday and will remain until tomorrow.

Dr. and Mrs. John Wehrly were there for the opening of the conclave, returning only this morning to their home, 519 Spurgeon street. Dr. and Mrs. D. A. Harwood left yesterday and will return late tomorrow evening to their home, 1102 West Seventeenth street. Dr. Merrill Hollingsworth is staying for the greater part of the conclave and Dr. Emmett Raitt and Dr. Fred E. Ercel were among local physicians leaving today for the event.

Dr. Rowland P. Yeagle is not attending the state session, he and Mrs. Yeagle having returned only last week from the annual convention of the American Medical association in Kansas City. They went east by plane and in Flite, Mich., secured the new automobile in which the homeward journey was made with stops in St. Louis and other points in addition to Kansas City.

John McAdam, inventor of macadamized roads, had to pay from his own pocket for the first roads thus paved, because the public had no faith in the idea.

Board May Replace Front of Building At Edison School

Bids on the general contract and various sub-contracts for reconstruction of the Edison school classrooms, damaged by earthquake, were taken under advisement until Wednesday by the board of education last night, after it was learned that the present front of the building, which was not included in rebuilding plans, is also "shaky" and probably must be replaced.

When they meet Wednesday noon, the board will discuss action upon the bids already received, and plans for rebuilding the front structure, probably as a separate unit, at a cost expected to reach $16,000 or $17,000, according to Architect F. H. Eley.

The low bid on the class-room program last night was $21,999 for two new class rooms, with an additional $8,633 if four classrooms are constructed. These sums would be either reduced or increased by alternate plans, if such were adopted. S. Giannone, of Los Angeles, was the low bidder, closely followed by O. T. Moore, Santa Ana contractor.

If all alternates should be adopted, and four classrooms built, the total of Moore's bid would be only slightly more than $40 above that of Giannone, it was found. Moore bid $22,282 on the two-classroom contract, with $8,489 added for two more class-rooms. His bids on alternate plans were more favorable in most instances than Giannone's, bringing the two bids close together when totals were reached.

Stark and Schmid, Santa Ana, bid $22,600 for the two classrooms with $8,835 added for two more. Blystone and Van Tuyle, Brea, bid $23,100 for two classrooms and added $9,000 for two more.

Electrical bids were as follows: Cave Electric, 5511; Gilbert-Watson-Stearns, 5543; C. M. Trusty and Sons, 5555. This was for two classrooms. Cave added $118 for the other two, Gilbert-Watson-Stearns adding $147, and Trusty adding $58.

Two heating bids were submitted. Payne, Burnace and Supply Company bidding $398 for two classrooms and another $398 for the other two; Pacific Plumbing Company bid $527 for two classrooms, and also doubled its bid for four classrooms.

The Hammond Construction Company, bidding on mastic floors, submitted figures ranging from $775 to $1,300, according to type of floor chosen.

There were two plumbing bids, Pacific Plumbing Company, Santa Ana, bidding $3045 on two classrooms, adding $130 for four classrooms, or $384 if new plumbing fixtures are used; Blystone and Van Tuyle, Brea, bid $3500 on two classrooms, adding $300 for two more, or $450 if new plumbing fixtures are used.

MIGHTY OILERS CHALLENGE STARS

2000 See Mat Champ Win

FANS PULL FOR CHRISTY, HURL BAGS AT LOPEZ

By PAUL VISSMAN

Vic Christy almost won the pseudo-world's championship heavyweight match title last night at Sam Sampson's Highway Horror House. The only reason he didn't get the synthetic title is the fact that the program called for Lopez to win in two straight falls.

Lopez won the first fall in 17 minutes when he pinned a hamster on Christy and made him say "Daddy" or "alright, alright." The second fall was in 7 minutes, going to Lopez on an airplane spin, a flock of socks to the puss and a body press.

The champion won the first fall under a barrage of popcorn, some of it loose and a lot of it wrapped in paper sacks, generously contributed by the fans in recognition of Lopez' ability as a slugger.

The Orange County Athletic club was jammed with 2000 pop-eyed partisans, some suspecting that Lopez' "title" might change hands. It was a radically pro-Christy mob that roared lustily every time the hero gave the villain some of his own medicine. But Lopez, a fierce workman, was not to be denied.

Elbow Batches Fell Vic of several holds, Lopez stared his famous elbow slam and had the challenger on the floor. Christy revived and started in punching and hammered the Mexican to the floor.

The seven-minute preceding the second fall was wild and woolly with Lopez choking, slugging and elbow slamming his way around.

Just before the windup Christy came to life and put over a counter-attack and was doing pretty well until Lopez went into the airplane spin and body press and another title was safe.

If George Kondelis gets any farther he will be a good match for "Strangler" Lewis and if he ever learns to wrestle that will be news. Last night he was defeated by "Dixie" Bill Sledge after 20 minutes of furious growling and grunting.

At that he had a tough time losing when Sledge almost missed a hold that was scheduled to do the job.

Early in the match Kondelis made Sledge suffer with a bunch of loose arm locks and was doing pretty well until the Dixie lad fastened a body scissors hold around Kondelis' middle and started vibrating.

After a few minutes of squeezing, while the Greek stared his famous Athenian suffering act, the boys broke loose while Kondelis took his turn and tossed Sledge from the ring. Leaping back through the ropes Sledge hit the Greek and pinned him with a body-slam and that is where the accident almost happened.

MRS. MOODY UNCOMFORTABLE

She Wants To Go Abroad Also Wants To Stay Home

SHE'LL PLAY IN U. S. EVENT

By HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 26.—Having spent so many days of my life bouncing about on the horns of a fractious dilemma, it was pleasant—yes, pleasant—yesterday to see someone else in the same uncomfortable predicament.

The sufferer was Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, usually the most imperious of women. I encountered her in the Marbles hall of the Grand Central Galleries, where she has an exhibition of 21 paintings, and she was more upset than she ever was on the court, even when her opponent stood at match-point.

I talked with her as she stood under one of her oil-pink elephant ears with purple violets. I believe it was titled—and she was in a dither. Not because of the painting, understand; pink elephant ears with purple violets is very well done, and shows a sure forehead and backhand with the paint brush. She was in a dither because she didn't know whether she should catch a boat for England to help the United States in the Wightman Cup matches and to defend her Wimbledon championship, or return to San Francisco and Husband Fred Moody.

"I want to go so much," she said, "because I'm only human and would like to establish a new record for Wimbledon championships. You see, if I should be lucky enough to win this year I would beat Mrs. Lambert Chambers' record of seven Wimbledon titles. I won my seventh, and tied Mrs. Chambers' mark, last year. Of course, I might not win, but I don't like to think about that."

I asked her why she didn't get on a boat and go, if she cared so much? After all, I pointed out, none of her paintings had been sold, at better than $400 per painting, and a celebration probably was in order.

"Yes," she answered, "nine have been sold, and I feel so inspired, but the tennis schedule this year is so confusing. If I went to England for the Wightman Cup and Wimbledon, I wouldn't be back in this country until late in July. That would be all right, except that our championships start at Forest Hills early in September, and I want to play in them. That would mean a wait of better than a month in New York. I just couldn't go home and then return for Forest Hills. Two such long train trips would kill me."

One owes that much to the public. As the greatest woman player of the game this nation has produced, she should not close her championship play in this country with the tournament which saw her default. And she should go to Wimbledon and play the Wightman Cup, Britain has enough honors, what with the biggest navy, the best looking foreign secretary, and the Dionne quintuplets. They don't need Mrs. Chambers.

It will delight the Forest Hills Tennis fathers to learn that Mrs. Moody is determined to play in the American championship. They were bitterly disappointed when she failed to show up last year, for the name Moody draws thousands in the gates, and to get in the gates the thousands have to buy tickets. And if there's anything a lawn tennis father admires more than a beautiful forehead drive to the corner, it's the sight of a box-office boy yanking in the dough with a sure, swift backhand.

This commentator on the sporting scene, whose observations are always models of sadness and fairness, thinks Mrs. Moody should play in both the Wimbledon and American championships, train ride or no train ride.

SLIPPING CUBS SEEK COLLINS TO PLAY FIRST

By HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

CHICAGO, May 26.—(UP)—The champion Chicago Cubs staggered back into Wrigley Field today with Manager Charley Grimm perched on first base once more scouting for a capable relief man.

Phil Cavarretta, prep school wonder who took Grimm's breath away with the ease with which he stepped into fast company a year ago, was benched indefinitely as the National league pennant-defenders fought off Cincinnati for a berth in the first division.

His hitting had plummeted to .250. The slump became so acute on the Cubs' rocky eastern tour, it began to affect the tall Italian youngster's work around first base. So Grimm is back, not to fire up the champions' attack with a block of base hits, but just to "balance up the infield."

"A few days' rest ought to put Phil back on his stride," Grimm said. "The weather's warm, now, and I guess I can hold up until he snaps out of the dumps."

But Charley's longing glances were focused on Owner P. K. Wrigley's bankroll, not on the bench where Cavarretta was sitting out his "sentence."

The $50,000 tossed in with "Chuck" Klein and Fabian Kousser for Curt Davis and Ethan Allen was just a starter if the Cubs would build up to pennant strength.

Since Dolph Camilli wasn't included in the deal with Philadelphia last week, Jim Collins, of the St. Louis Cardinals, is the logical man for Grimm. He can field and hit hard although he's been pushed out of the picture by one of the hardest-hitting rookies in the major leagues—Johnnie Mize.

One owes that much to the public. As the greatest woman player of the game this nation has produced, she should not close her championship play in this country with the tournament which saw her default. And she should go to Wimbledon and play the Wightman Cup, Britain has enough honors, what with the biggest navy, the best looking foreign secretary, and the Dionne quintuplets. They don't need Mrs. Chambers.

It will delight the Forest Hills Tennis fathers to learn that Mrs. Moody is determined to play in the American championship. They were bitterly disappointed when she failed to show up last year, for the name Moody draws thousands in the gates, and to get in the gates the thousands have to buy tickets. And if there's anything a lawn tennis father admires more than a beautiful forehead drive to the corner, it's the sight of a box-office boy yanking in the dough with a sure, swift backhand.

This commentator on the sporting scene, whose observations are always models of sadness and fairness, thinks Mrs. Moody should play in both the Wimbledon and American championships, train ride or no train ride.

One owes that much to the public. And she should go to Wimbledon and play the Wightman Cup, Britain has enough honors, what with the biggest navy, the best looking foreign secretary, and the Dionne quintuplets. Olive To Play Here; Lacy Joins Orange

Olive and Santa Ana baseball officials, rugged rivals in more than one "box office argument," smoked the pipe of peace long enough today to agree that their National league game scheduled Friday at Olive will be played in the Municipal Bowl here instead.

Last year the Stars and Packers couldn't get together on terms and all their games listed at Olive were played there.

Tom Lacy, young Santa Ana utility player, has been shipped to the Orange club under option, Manager George Lackaye announced. He reverts to the Stars August 25, the night the National league season closes. Lacy plays with Orange tonight at Anaheim.

BOLD VENTURE BOWS TENDON, OUT ONE YEAR

By HENRY SUPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 26.—A great race was nothing but a dream today with withdrawal of Bold Venture, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Pimlico Preakness, from the Belmont Stakes.

The son of St. Germans-Possible missed his chance to wear the "triple" crown for three-year-olds by bowing a tendon in an easy six furlong workout yesterday.

His owner, Morton Schwartz, and trainer, Max Hirsch, agreed there was nothing to do but retire him from training for a year.

The Belmont had edged up as a racing classic with Bold Venture matching strides with Joseph E. Widener's Bravery, the horse he beat by a head at Churchill, and

SLOAN TOSSES NEW BROADSIDE AT NEW DEAL

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—(UP)—A direct challenge to New Deal theorists, which he said had failed to put 10,000,000 unemployed Americans back to work, was hurled by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors, at a joint banquet of the Oakland and San Francisco chambers of commerce last night.

Sloan said unemployment does not hinge on shortening the hours of work of those now employed but on the harnessing of man power and materials to produce goods of the luxury and semi-luxury class "which millions desire."

He recommended that new "industrial statesmanship" replace government statesmanship in trying to find a solution of the unemployment problem.

Under "industrial statesmanship," he said, attention must be directed not only toward creating more jobs, but also to creating better jobs.

"Jobs destroyed in one place are more than replaced by more and different jobs created elsewhere," Sloan said. "We know that the highly mechanized industries are the ones in which employment is relatively the best. On the other hand, those that have made the smallest advance in mechanization are those which are still the most depressed."

The motor corporation executive said he was out of sympathy with the theory that the United States has reached a point in its industrial development where man power seeking employment is in excess of the country's ability to consume its products. He said the only thing which has failed in the United States is operating technique.

The GLAMOROUS ADVENTURE

by Jean Seiwright

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GAIL EVERETT, winner of the John & Lane costume design prize, comes to New York to find work. Gail's parents are both dead. She has spent the past three years at MISS CRANSTON'S fashionable school for girls—due to Miss Cranston's generosity and friendship for Gail's mother.

Armed with a letter from Lane, Gail goes to his office and is told he is out of town. DEREK HARGREAVES, an artist, overhears this conversation and offers to help Gail. He advises her to go to MADAME LISETTE'S shop to apply for a job.

Gail arrives there just after temperamental Madame Lizette has learned her designer has gone to Hollywood. Gail gets the job and goes to work next morning.

On the way to the shop after lunch she encounters DICK SEARLES, whose sister, ROSEMARY, was Gail's roommate at school. The Searles are very wealthy. Dick tries to make a date with Gail, but she postpones it.

Back at the shop, Madame Lizette sends for some sketches Gail has made.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

DEJECTEDLY Gail flung herself on her bed when she entered her room. How quickly her rosy dreams had been shattered! Now she thought bitterly of those dreams. Why had Madame deliberately declared she wanted designs suitable for older women, when Gail's instructions had been to prepare youthful models?

Perhaps Madame had resented the fact that Gail had returned late after lunch; though, if she had looked at the time cards, she would have seen that Gail had not been gone even an hour. Then her thoughts flew to Dick. She liked him. He was a good companion. Never having had a brother of her own, Gail had looked upon him as one ever since Rosemary had died.

Of course they were older now. Gail was 19 and Dick was 23—going into his father's office in the fall. Well, the girl who married him would have a good time, and never a single worry about making ends meet.

Gail rose from the bed. Things hadn't come quite so close a stage with her that she would grasp the first chance to seek security—marry a man whom she did not love. Then she laughed softly. She knew suddenly what was wrong. She was hungry!

Pulling off her frock, she opened her wardrobe trunk (she hadn't unpacked it, for the future still seemed rather uncertain) and selected a lovely green dress of featherweight wool. Then, as she started to run the water for her bath, the telephone tinkled insistently.

Gail hastened to pick up the receiver. It must be Dick—but as she answered the call a sudden thrill of happiness rose in her heart. Derek's voice came over the wire.

"Tonight," she repeated, and her eyes were shining. . . . "to celebrate. . . . But I don't know yet if I've made good! Madame said I was in half an hour. . . . I was delighted," and she replaced the receiver gently in its cradle.

"Tonight," she repeated, and her eyes were shining. . . . "to celebrate. . . . But I don't know yet if I've made good! Madame said I was in half an hour. . . . I was delighted," and she replaced the receiver gently in its cradle.

"Oh, I don't think you need to worry. Besides, we can always have another celebration if need be. Any special place where you'd like to dine?"

"No. I haven't lived in New York since I was a youngster, so every place is new."

"Well, I think you'll like the place I have in mind. It's in the Village, and if you're interested in seeing some of the celebrities about town as well as some of the Park Avenue set we'll go to Ivan's."

"That sounds intriguing." "The food's very good—lots of Russian dishes. And now, let's take a taxi. You see, I don't have a car."

"Why not the subway?" asked Gail, who had already learned the various modes of transportation in New York. "It's quick—"

"And cheap," added Derek. "But that doesn't count tonight because I've just had a check for an illustration I did months ago. I'd quite forgotten it. The firm went broke and the advertising agent refused to pay until he knew what was coming to him. . . . so you see we're celebrating 'Found Money!'"

IN spite of Derek's remonstrances—for he felt a taxi was a necessity, not a luxury according to the present state of his finances—they went downtown in the subway, walking the short block to Ivan's.

The three rooms in the basement of the old brownstone house were crowded, but Derek and Gail were seated at a small table in the glassed-in room which had been added at the rear.

Gail looked around eagerly, her

Burn Bonds At Barbecue In City Park

WESTMINSTER, May 26.—A community celebration marking the completion of payments on the $25,000 Westminster Drainage district bonds was held at Westminster park last night, with over 100 residents in attendance.

O. D. Day was barbecue chairman. A hill billy band provided numbers during the meal. Burning of the bonds was in charge of H. B. Anderson and W. Dean Johnston.

Willis Warner, for many years a local business man, and present mayor of Huntington Beach, who has been the only secretary of the district, reviewed the history of the district. Warner told of the securing of S. H. Finley as engineer to work out plans for the district, his estimate of $25,000 being used for the bond election.

The first directors were W. Dean Johnston, who was president of the board, from district No. 1; Lloyd Edwards, district No. 2, and Ed Colter, No. 3. In the 30 years there have been but six different directors; Johnson, Colter, Lloyd Edwards, at two different times; John Kettler, twice; Finley E. Henion and H. B. Anderson, the last three named being on the present board.

Nine miles of the canals in the district are now used and covered. One hundred acres of land has been added to the district the past year.

Ed Larter, who was president of the chamber of commerce of Westminster at the time the district was inaugurated, was called upon for a speech. W. Dean Johnston and John Kettler spoke briefly, as did H. B. Anderson, who was master of ceremonies.

Reports of the Queen Esther summer camp were given by Betty Wagner; and Vera Journein and Nellie Johnson reported on the recent Queen Esther rally at Costa Mesa.

Those attending were Eleanor Earle, Antoinette Johnson, Betty and Barbara Wagner, Evelyn McFadden, Donna Frost, Joanne Davis, Nellie Scott, Mary Hudson, Betty Harner, Nellie Johnson, Lois and Vera Journein, Louise Carson, the hostess and advisors.

POLICE SCHOOL TO BE OPENED HERE IN FALL

Santa Ana and southern Orange county will have a police school next fall, under auspices of the Santa Ana department of adult education.

Police departments of Santa Ana, Orange, Tustin, Huntington Beach, Newport Beach, Laguna Beach and possibly San Clemente, are expected to study modern police methods under the supervision of an instructor recommended by the Los Angeles police department.

Walter H. Young, Los Angeles attorney who has been an instructor in the Los Angeles police school for the last four years, will be the instructor. He will be paid by the Santa Ana school district, the course being presented as part of the adult education program.

Chief of Police F. W. Howard, of Santa Ana, today explained that besides members of the various police departments, several members of the Santa Ana fire department and others interested in learning police work will attend the course. A two-year course will be presented, patterned on the Los Angeles three-year course, which will be slightly condensed. The board of education approved the project last night and agreed to assume the cost of the instructor.

Attorney Young will deliver several preliminary lectures here this summer regarding the police course to open in the fall.

BROTHERHOOD TO HEAR REV. SCHROCK

GARDEN GROVE, May 26. — The Rev. Perry Schrock, pastor of the First Congregational church of Santa Ana, will address the United Church brotherhood this evening at the First Methodist church. The subject of his address will be "Three Acute Problems of Mexico."

A talk will also be given by John Winterbourne of the Bowers museum on exhibits featured at the museum. Miss Dorothy Smith, local high school student, will give vocal numbers.

Women are invited and tickets for the dinner at 6:30 o'clock may be secured from Harvey Emley, Garfield Allen and Allen Goddard.

Program Held By Tustin Society

TUSTIN, May 26. — "Spanish Speaking People, Both Foreign and Home," was the theme of the program of the Woman's Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church of Tustin recently held in the church parlor. Mrs. M. C. Pollard, president, presided.

Mrs. Philip Ebel and Mrs. Ed Dietrich were in charge of the program. Mrs. M. E. Marshall and Mrs. George Hatfield told about Spanish people in Latin America and Mrs. Eleanor Duncan told about the Spanish missions in Albuquerque, N. M.

JIMMY FIDLER in HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD, May 26. — Idle chatter: Signs in all Paramount studio buildings warn: In case of earthquake or fire, get out of the building immediately. But most people know that during a severe quake, the safest haven is a one or two-story building. Sight to bring a smile to the lips: Six foot-two-plus Gary Cooper airing his wife's three-pound toy bull. Circus season is Wallace Beery's Utopian era. He and adopted daughter Carol Ann rarely miss an evening performance, even though the big tent remains for days in Los Angeles. Robert Montgomery is touted as the colony's leading backgammonist, but a hit player on Bob's set trampled him at the game for six days running.

Add contagious smiles: Freddie Bartholomew's ever notice how his smile makes you want to follow suit? Studio chaffeurs union at Fox voted on star they prefer to drive above all others: Claudette Colbert was unanimous choice. Mr. Clark Gable's elegant crack: "The only two women in pictures with sex appeal are Mae West and Shirley Temple." Softball baseball season is here again. Bing Crosby, Victor McLaglen, Buck Jones, Jeanette MacDonald, Andy Clyde, Pat O'Brien, Joe Penner, and Director W. S. Van Dyke sponsor Hollywood league teams. Errol Flynn continues his writing, aside from his acting career, because "It's something to fall back on if this movie balloon busts!"

Hugh Herbert has taken out a license with the California Game commission to raise pheasants. It reminds me that Hugh is breeding fowl of all sorts at his ranch-home, but recently he divorced himself from all personal contact with the feathered populi. When Hugh first turned gentleman-farmer, he thought it would be a splendid idea to feed the chickens and turkeys himself. All was well and fine until last Thanksgiving, when Hugh invited friends to a turkey dinner. Came the gong, and the guests filed to their chairs. Hugh sat down, and presently the roast turkey arrived. The screen comedian stared at it silently for an instant, then turned sad eyes on all present. "That's Bertha," he said, shaking his head. Then he walked out of the dining room, unable to eat.

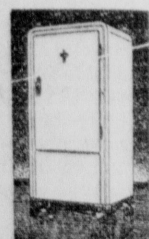

A surprising percentage of California's tourist travel may be traced directly to child idolization of screen stars, and Joe E. Brown had an example of this the other day. He was lunching at the Assistance League when an eleven-year-old boy came to his table and rather breathlessly announced that he had come all the way from Chicago to see Joe. It developed from Brown's talks with the boy's parents that they actually had turned westward instead of towards New York because their son had pleaded so persistently. Dropping water on stone, you know.

I know of other such cases. A year or so ago, a mother and father in Cincinnati took their small daughter to a doctor, who tried in vain to diagnose her wasted condition. After long inquiry he learned that the little girl was an ardent Greta Garbo fan, and that she pleaded constantly to be taken to Hollywood to see her idol. The doctor suggested that the child's health might be saved if her wish were granted, and the parents really did come to Hollywood. They spent days here in vain effort to meet Greta. At last somebody heard the pathetic story, and retold it to one of the Swedish star's rare few friends. I suppose less than half a dozen people know to this day that Garbo, who might disdain audience with the whole of Congress, had this little girl visit her old home in Brentwood Heights, and spent almost an hour in her company. I presume it is needless to add that the parents and girl still live in Hollywood, and the youngster is the healthiest, sun-brownest child you ever could imagine.

Spanish Village Draws Sportsmen

SAN CLEMENTE, May 26.—San Clemente is rapidly becoming a favorite resort for sportsmen, particularly fishermen. It is estimated that more than 1500 sportsmen left the San Clemente pier Sunday to spend the day on the barge Kaha and on the small fishing boats that operate from this port. Returning fishermen report that quantities of yellowtail, barracuda, bass, halibut and tuna are being caught offshore.

C. O. Eaton, caddy house manager, reported many players on the San Clemente golf course Sunday and said that prospects for increased play during the summer are bright. Many of these players, he said, are tourists who are favorably impressed with the course. Ladies are permitted to play without charge every Thursday.

SCHOOL BOARD EMPLOYS NEW MUSIC TEACHER

The board of education last night hired a high school music teacher, a junior high school shop instructor, and trade a high school teacher to Hawaii.

The trade sends Miss Ruth Rowland, home economics instructor here, to Hilo High school, Hawaii, in exchange for Miss Nellie Connolly, of that school. The exchange will be made for one year.

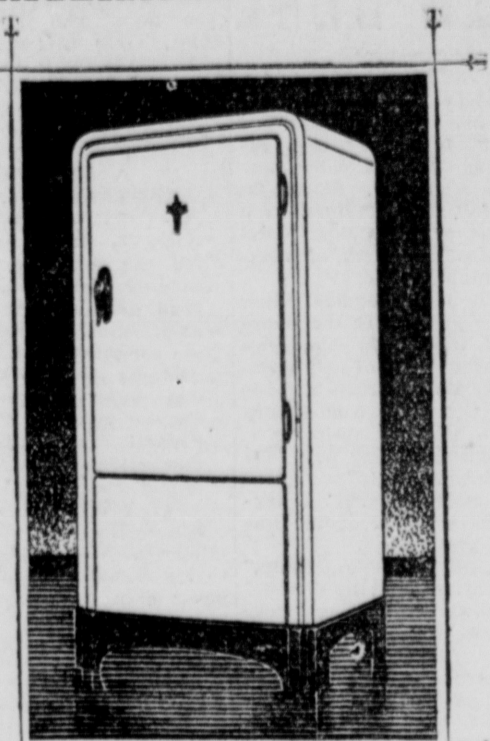

On recommendation of Superintendent Frank Henderson and Director D. K. Hammond, of Santa Ana Junior College, the board transferred Harold Moomaw from the Lathrop Junior high school staff, to teach engineering full-time in Santa Ana Junior college. This will release Rufus Bond from part-time service in junior college and make him a full-time instructor in high school.

Moomaw has been instructor in the Lathrop shops for eight years and has had highway engineering service in Oregon.

Herbert Bickel, now teaching in Santa Barbara Junior High school, was elected high school music instructor, at a salary of $2100 per year. Bickel is a graduate of the University of Illinois, with special training at U. S. C. He has been teaching since 1924 in Illinois, Kansas City, Santa Monica Junior college, Burbank high school, and Santa Barbara. He was highly recommended to the local board by former superiors, including Dr. Percy Davis, former Santa Ana superintendent, now at Santa Monica.

Miss Hazel Yergee, graduate of Santa Ana high and junior college, and U. C. L. A., was elected as an elementary teacher. Payne, fourth grade; Miss Edyth Spencer, third grade; Mrs. Mildred Moulton, second grade; Miss Beatrice Brockman, first; Miss Ruth Spencer, kindergarten; Miss Helen Schoenbergh, Americanization room.

School Board To Sponsor $615,000 Bond Election

MONEY WILL BE USED TO REPAY
BUILDING LOAN

The initial step in a move by the Santa Ana board of education to save approximately $125,000 in interest charges on the $615,000 Green-bill loan for school reconstruction, was taken last night when the board authorized the drafting of resolutions calling for a bond election to retire the Green-bill loan.

Action was taken last night when it was learned that there were no legal or technical obstacles to the economy move, the Los Angeles bond attorneys, O'Melveny, Tuller and Myers, having indicated that they will approve a bond issue voted for retirement of the Green-bill loan.

Deputy District Attorney Preston Turner, legal advisor of school boards in the county, was requested by the local board last night to prepare the forms of resolutions calling the $615,000 bond issue, to be submitted to the bond attorneys for their approval, before the election is definitely called.

Other inquiries conducted by the board with respect to the condition of the current bond market, as reported by Chairman George Wells last night, revealed that the market is as favorable now as it was several months ago when the board first conceived the idea of replacing the Green-bill loan with bonds bearing a lower rate of interest.

Indicate Interest Saving
Recent bond sales in the county, at an interest rate as low as 2.5 per cent, indicate a probable saving of about 2 per cent if new bonds were voted to retire the Green-bill loan, which costs the district 4.4 per cent interest.

This, it was pointed out, would mean an interest saving of $12,000 the first year, and an average saving of $7000 to $8000 annually over the remainder of the 20-year period the Green-bill loan would run. During that period the saving would aggregate approximately $125,000, it was estimated by School Auditor Harold Yost.

The informal opinion of the bond attorneys was reported to the board last night by Preston Turner. The written opinion is expected to arrive shortly.

The $615,000 Green-bill money was borrowed following the 1933 earthquake, for school reconstruction; $500,000 was borrowed by the high school district and $115,000 by the elementary district.

MAY DRILL MORE
STATE POOL WELLS

HUNTINGTON BEACH, May 26.—Recent announcement that some of the oil operators whose whipstocked wells have been closed down through litigation, would be permitted to redrill their wells into the state tideland pool has caused a flurry of interest in the west end town lot area.

It is now believed that other wells not involved in litigation may be permitted to drill, especially by those for which permits have been granted, but which were shut down by state officials through court injunctions, according to statements of independent oil operators.

The new petitions providing for tideland drilling from littoral lands are being circulated here. These petitions would confine whipstocking to Standard Oil company leases in this oil field. This measure will be opposed by lot owners and oil companies which have town lot leases from which the rich tideland oil pool can be reached as easily as from the littoral lands, it is claimed.

WHAT ABOUT HAM COTTON?
ASK DEMOCRATIC CHIEFS

By GEORGE HART

What about Ham Cotton? Is it still Ham Cotton, Democratic boss of those parts? Or is it now Ham Cotton, erstwhile Democratic boss of those parts?

A lot of people would like to know. Mostly they are Democrats. Particularly the patronage seekers. And the office seekers. But the rank and file, too, would like to know whether they shall continue to salute when Mr. Cotton's name is mentioned.

They are asking whether it is true that Senator McAdoo and his partner, Mr. Neblett, are really flashing the steel toward Mr. Cotton. And if so, what? So what? In other words.

What effect would that have on local political candidates endorsed by Mr. Cotton? Would his support help or hurt? Those are tremendous questions these days.

Puzzling Situation
There are some who quietly—at least not too noisily—assert that it is true about Mr. Neblett and Senator McAdoo. These also assert that the effect has not been beneficial to Mr. Cotton, politically, and that it will have a similar effect upon candidates he may endorse.

There are others who say that this is not at all the case, that it would not be wise to sell Mr. Cotton short, so to speak; that his prestige is unspotted and as white as his name.

Those who report a schism with Senator McAdoo and Mr. Neblett, and who say this has hurt Mr. Cotton's influence, point a confident finger at the returns from the recent presidential primary, when Democratic voters of the state selected delegates to the national convention. Mr. Cotton was the local member of the slate of delegates headed by Senator McAdoo.

Cotton Trails Delegation
Mr. Cotton ran far behind the other delegates through the state. It is said, in Orange county, his home territory, where he might have been expected to lead the ticket, and where a good deal of "single shooting" was reported to have been done, with that end in view, Mr. Cotton still trailed the other delegates. He was low man on the ticket, with 10,760 votes. Senator McAdoo, heading the slate, received 18,894, a margin of 134 over Cotton. That is partly explained by the advantage the head of the ticket always gains in such elections. But the second man on the list, Isadore Dockweiler, got 10,785 votes, which about represented the lead the list as a whole maintained over Mr. Cotton, the supposedly favorite son.

And that, say the reporters of the schism, shows what has happened to Mr. Cotton and what is likely to happen to his candidates.

VETERAN LEADERS URGE
STORES CLOSE SATURDAY

Commanders of three veterans' organizations today joined in an urgent plea for merchants of Santa Ana to keep their business houses closed all day Saturday, Memorial Day, in respect to the memory of the nation's heroic dead.

Allison Honer, commander of Santa Ana Post No. 131, American Legion; Glenn Hendrickson, commander of Ernest F. Kellogg Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Van L. Brown, commander of Jack Fisher Chapter, Disabled Veterans of the World War issued a joint request that the stores remain closed during the day.

In their statement they pointed out that it is a small thing to ask merchants to close their stores one day in the year as a tribute to those veterans of all wars who gave their lives that this nation might prosper.

"May 30 is a day set aside for memory—memory of those men who, unselfishly, answered when their country called. They forsook stores, fields and professions. Unselfishly they rallied to defend the nation and, when the time came, made the supreme sacrifice willingly.

"Is it asking too much then to request that business houses remain closed on this day of memory while all citizens visit the cemeteries, offer a silent prayer and leave a spray of flowers on a veteran's grave?"

One day Mr. Jones completed his day's work early and took an earlier train, arriving at the suburban station at 3 p. m. He decided to start walking home. On the way he was met by the chauffeur, who had not known Mr. Jones would be on an earlier train, and was driven home from that point. Mr. Jones arrived home twenty minutes earlier than his customary time. Allowing no time for such incidents as turning the car around, etc., what time did the chauffeur meet Mr. Jones as he was walking home?

YOUTH PLANS
MEMORIAL DAY
PEACE RALLY

With plans going forward for a county-wide Youth Peace Rally, to be held at Irvine park on Memorial Day, May 30, it is expected that much interest will be shown, according to Jerry Briggs, chairman of the program. A number of youth speakers will be featured, several of whom are well known in local oratorical and debating circles it is said.

The view to creating the widest interest possible, a number of youth organizations in the county have been invited to participate in the program. It is expected that G. Arthur Cassidy of Los Angeles will be the principal speaker.

An all-day picnic is planned, the peace program to begin at 2 o'clock, Briggs said. All youth or youth organizations who would like to be featured on the program or who wish further particulars are asked to inquire of Jerry Briggs, 811 West Central avenue, Balboa.

—The state wide local option petitions were circulated in the churches of the city Sunday. Tables were placed in the church corridors and the church people signed them as they left the churches after the morning and evening services. Many hundred people signed in this city.

DISPLAY BONES
OF PREHISTORIC

Bones of the 400,000-year-old prehistoric horse and other animals found 30 to 40 feet below the surface of the ground during excavation work along 2.6 miles of Imperial highway, near La Habra last week, are on display at Charles W. Bowers Memorial museum at North Main and Twentieth streets until 4:30 p. m. today and will be on display Thursday, again, between 10 a. m. and 12 noon, and between 2 and 4:30 p. m.

That was the announcement of Mrs. F. E. Coulter, museum curator, who made arrangements for the display. The museum is closed tomorrow.

The bones were discovered by workmen of the R. E. Campbell Construction company which holds the contract for the Imperial highway improvement between La Mirada and Lutfwiler avenues, along the county line. Numerous scientists are studying the group of prehistoric finds and several are expected to come here for further study.

Besides the large, most ancient of horses, the group on display includes bones of a mastodon and giant sloth, estimated by scientists to be 25,000 years old, buffalo 15,000 to 20,000 years old, a perfect shark's tooth and oyster shells. Mrs. Coulter said. Additional excavations of the petrified bones are being made with scientists seeking to write another chapter for the "true-history" period of life on earth.

EXPECT 25,000
PEOPLE TO BE AT L. B. RODEO

The first annual Long Beach Rodeo to be held Memorial Day weekend at the old historical Bryant ranch will draw a capacity attendance of more than 25,000 persons, Johnny Wilcox, ticket manager, stated last night.

Advance sales by the 12 pretty co-eds competing for the title of "Sweetheart" for the two-day roundup, has been far greater than expected, with the rodeo still nine days away. From the present reservations, the management predicts that the entire box and reserved sections will be consumed by the thousands of people in this territory before next Friday night.

The truly western rodeo is to be similar to the shows presented at Cheyenne, Wyoming and Pendleton, Ore. All the important cowboy contestants will be entered. There are twelve major events.

The "sweetheart" will be selected by votes accumulated through points earned in ticket sales, and the winner is to be feted at both the Saturday and Sunday afternoon performances. In addition, she will receive a trip through the courtesy of the American Airlines, Inc., to the Texas Centennial at Dallas; and with all expenses paid and a large cash award from the Rodeo association.

"Tickets in this city may be obtained at leading stores in this city now, and the votes will aid Miss Margaret Marie Crowell, the Santa Ana representative.

Tustin Students
Guests At Party

TUSTIN, May 26.—The annual party sponsored by P. T. A. mothers of eighth grade students for the Tustin grammar school eighth grade graduates was held recently with approximately 60 children present.

Mrs. W. S. Leinberger was chairman of the committee arranging the event. Games and contests were enjoyed in the kindergarten room from 7:30 to 10 p. m., following which the young people assembled in the school cafeteria room where refreshments were served by the mothers.

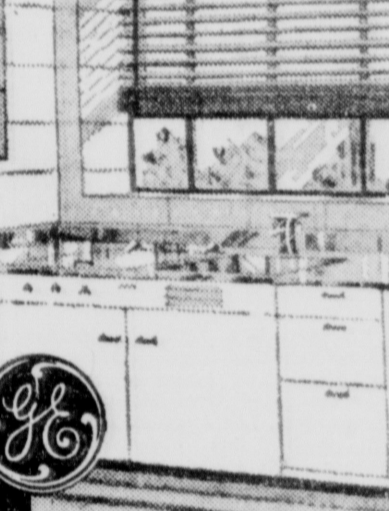

ORANGE COUNTY
MAN PERFECTS
MAGIC STUNT

WESTMINSTER, May 26.—Clyde Day, who has gained prominence in the field of legerdemain the past several years, and with the "Mythic 13," exclusive group of magicians in Los Angeles, has perfected a new feature which he exhibited this week, for the first time outside the magicians' club.

The new trick is styled "Chinese Pagoda," and is given as Day tells a mythical story of a Chinese god who keeps a food supply in a certain temple. A robber decides to steal the food and taking it from the temple places it in a container, and, when some distance from the temple, discovers the god has taken the food from him, leaving only the container.

Day places the feed in the miniature "temple," which is his own work, removes it, showing the temple empty and his container filled, and walks away across the stage, only to show the audience the container is empty and the food again replaced in the temple.

Officers of the organization are W. J. Goodhue, president; L. Bailor, vice president, and J. Hildebrand, secretary-treasurer.

SOCIETY AND CLUBS

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

Former Jaycee Campus Days Recalled by Party Guests

Reminiscences of happy associations on Santa Ana Junior college campus were shared last night by a group of close friends invited to an evening party given by Mrs. Bruce Harding (Lorna Aiken) and Mrs. Carleton Smith (Miriam Samuelson) in the Smith home, 516 West Fifth street.

It was the first time several members of the group had met since their jaycee days, and so bridge played a more or less minor role in the entertainment plan. After the game was introduced, it brought success to the Misses Neva McDonald, Florence Stanley and Norma Wilson, who received prizes in the order of their scoring.

Mrs. Harding provided many of the flowers used so effectively in decorating for the event. The hostesses gave a charming treatment to the tables for the refreshment hour, by using all white linens with deep red glass, including very branched centerpieces, centering each table. Chocolate tart garnished with whipped cream was served with coffee, tea and salted nuts.

In the party with Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Smith were Mrs. William Juvonen (Katherine Harwood), Miss Esther Romoff and Miss Verna Helm, Los Angeles; Miss Neva McDonald, Long Beach; Miss Hazel McDonald, Berkeley; Mrs. Paul Snow (Martha Henderson), Mrs. Lee Hasenjaeger (Rosalind Schilling), the Misses Helen Bower, Grace Wurster, Agnes McKinstry, Norma Wilson and Florence Stanley, Santa Ana.

Dessert Bridge Event

Officers of Hermosa chapter O. E. S. were guests at a party given Saturday afternoon when committee members of the chapter joined in entertaining in the home of Mrs. Mary Walter, 1605 East Fourth street. Hostesses with Mrs. Walters were Mesdames Dolly Pope, Pearl Livesey, Vera Jacoby, Edith J. Snow, Catherine Crowe, Marie Beisel, Grace Finn and Miss Mayme Havens.

Officers who were guests were Miss Henrietta Bohling, worthy matron, and Mesdames Elizabeth Lewis, Helen Lunker, Ethel De Wolfe, Bessie Meyer, Mildred Taylor, Etta Sweetnell Winslow, Gladys Goodrich, Jeannette Tarpel, Louise Chapin, Bertha Wahlberg, Harriet Jones, Clara Sever, Helen Nell, Ruby Drake.

Loes and cakes bearing the Star emblem were served early in the afternoon at tables decorated with flowers and tapers. Prizes in bridge were won by Mrs. Chapin, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Jones, who held first, second and low scores. Mrs. Sweet received a door prize.

In Water Pageant

One of the most delightful of the innumerable parties joining in Saturday's gala water revue at Newport Harbor, was that entertained by Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Wilson aboard the "Lestellie." The hosts have combined their given names of Leslie and Stella, very cleverly in christening their boat. Fluttering with flags, pennants and banners, the "Lestellie" was a colorful part of the pageant, and had as her mascot, small Sandra Walker, daughter of the Victor Walkers of this city and Balboa. Sandra was a very trim little sailor in her sailor's cap and blouse of blue. She accompanied her parents, who were included in the guest list of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, together with Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Wilson, Mrs. C. E. Walker of this city, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cushing of Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mauer and Mrs. Virginia Robinson of Oceanside, and Mrs. O. W. Weathers of Rose, Ore., who arrived recently for a two weeks' visit in the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Walker.

Neighborhood Party

Neighborhood friends were guests Friday night at a party in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cowdrey, 2201 Orange avenue. Hosts were the Cowdreys and Mesdames L. J. Ozburn, Earl Lepper and L. V. Brown. Prizes in lawn were won by Mrs. William Lindemann and Lynn Haffer, who scored high; Mrs. Fred Hanson and E. R. Adelman, second high. Refreshments were served in a setting provided by pastel-hued flowers.

In the group were Messrs. and Mesdames E. R. Adelman, James Province, William Lindemann, L. R. Musick, Fred Hanson, Sidney Messinger, Stewart Gibbs, Louis Henderson, Leonard White, Leonard Hamaker, Lynn Haffer and Mr. Howard McHenry, with the four host couples.

Japanese Artists Provide Fascinating Club Program

Japanese arts of the present day, with a background of centuries of development, were described and demonstrated for members of Eboli society yesterday afternoon in the clubhouse, when Akemi Togo and Shi-zuko Okajima presented a fascinating program. Miss Togo, as the Japanese flower ambassador to the United States, discussed "Flower Arrangement," and Miss Okajima, "Japanese Moods in Poetry and Dance."

Flower arrangement was described as an intelligent amusement which has been popular with the people of the Orient since the sixth century. The flower ambassador pointed out that natives of Japan study flower arrangement just as seriously as they do languages. They make this study as part of their cultural development; to bring grace and beauty into the home, and to interpret the beauty of nature, she said.

Curves of Beauty
Miss Togo explained how the primary factors governing flower arrangement in Japan were the lines representing the curve of heaven, the curve of man and the curve of earth. These later became known as the primary, secondary and tertiary lines, with the fourth line providing the balance in the vase used for arrangement of the flowers.

Through their expositions of Oriental art, both Miss Togo and Miss Okajima gave evidence of the part which symbolism plays in the lives of the Japanese people. Miss Okajima opened her part of the program with an explanation of the significance of dancing to her people. "The Japanese dancer dances to the meaning of the words of the song, not to the rhythm," she said.

Dance Poems
Her first dance was to the selection whose first lines were, "To the plum tree too, the color of spring is added." This was in celebration of the birth of a new year, and was expressive of the symbolism of the Orient. A Japanese folk dance which followed, was quite elemental but fascinating with its unexpected developments eloquent of the miseries and then the joys in the life of a peasant.

Japanese moods in poetry were expressed gracefully through the recitation of an Amy Lowell poem; the poem, "A Japanese Love Song," and Miss Okajima's own translation of "Swallows on the Bamboo Tree." These were all interpreted orally, with dance accompaniment, as were other poems on the program.

Poster-Barker Music company installed a phonograph, and loaned records for the occasion.

Former Santa Anan Weds at Quiet Rites

Word has been received here of the wedding of Miss Alice Biner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Biner, formerly of this city, to E. Haskell, which occurred Sunday, May 17 in St. Cecilia's Catholic church, Los Angeles. The Rev. Father Brady, pastor, officiated at the quiet ceremony.

The bride was gowned in pale blue and white, with a corsage bouquet of Tallman roses and lilies of the valley. Guests at the ceremony included the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Haskell, who came from Colorado for the wedding. The newly-married couple plan to go to Colorado for their honeymoon trip. Their present address is 3923 1/2 Builong avenue, Los Angeles.

The new Mrs. Haskell, attended Santa Ana High school during her sophomore and junior years, and was graduated from Manual Arts High school, Los Angeles. Mr. Haskell received his diploma from Hooper High school, Hooper, Colo.

Girls' Eboli Society

Girls' Eboli society members were entertained Friday afternoon in the home of Miss Betty Jane Moore, Tustin, where the Misses Helen Marshall and Barbara Davis were co-hostesses.

Ms. F. C. Rowland and Miss Virginia Curry poured tea during the pleasant social time which preceded other events of the afternoon. Miss Ann Wetherell played piano solos.

Miss Barbara Davis conducted business matters, during which plans were made to hold the next meeting all day June 6 in the home of Miss Jean Dowds at Balboa Beach.

A lace cloth which the society will present to general Eboli society was on display during the afternoon.

The twin sisters were born May 21 in the Santa Ana home of their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Thompson. Mrs. White and Mrs. Matthews spent part of the time in Santa Bernardino, where they were guests in the home of the former's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Willard White.

Hi-Hatters
Hi-Hatters made a caravan trip to Lake Arrowhead Sunday, leaving here at noon and arriving at the popular resort shortly after two o'clock. They took a number of snapshots to serve as a record of the day with other material collected for the club scrapbook.

The young people left the mountains at 5 o'clock, stopping in Santa Bernardino for dinner. Some of the group formed a theater party after arriving in Santa Ana. Tentative arrangements were made for a trip to the exposition in San Diego in the near future.

Series of May Parties Is Concluded With Bridge Dinner

That series of formal luncheon and dinner parties with which May has been made so delightful in the A. C. Flagg home, 1820 North Broadway, was brought to a conclusion last night when Mr. and Mrs. Flagg entertained at dinner and contract in their home.

Flower shaded candles brightening the linen-spread tables soared into the air from mounds of velvety pansies. Dinner cards later served as tallies in the contract games. Mrs. Flagg was assisted in serving the dinner menu by her daughters, Miss Miriam ("Jimmie") Flagg and Mrs. Riley Huber (Margaret Flagg).

First, second and third scores in contract won prizes for both men and women players in the after-dinner series of games. Messrs. George S. Briggs, Howard Timmons and Irwin F. Landis were the ranking three among the men, while women players with corresponding scores were Mesdames Will A. Flood, Howard Timmons and James Harding.

Mr. and Mrs. Flagg's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Tuthill, Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin J. MacMillen, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Timmons, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. James Harding, Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Irwin F. Landis, Mr. Will A. Flood, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rowland and Dr. Melbourne Mabey.

Sunday Night Supper

A gay little Sunday night supper was shared in the Thomas H. Glenn home, 2475 Riverside drive, by an intimate group comprising Dr. and Mrs. Francis Finley, weekend guests in the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Loyal K. King and Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Hammond had been invited to join the hosts and their house-guests, and arrived with home-prepared dishes to add to the supper menu. Mrs. Glenn used snapdragons in brightening her home where bridge was played during the evening, with Mr. King securing the prize.

Dr. and Mrs. Finley continued yesterday morning to San Diego where Dr. Finley is to attend the California Medical association convocation at Hotel del Coronado.

Party Guests Choose Shower Gifts For Recent Bride

Planned as a post-nuptial compliment to Mrs. Archie Beadles, who prior to her marriage on May 18 was Miss Bethel Watson of Santa Ana Gardens, was an enjoyable party held late the past week in the home of Mrs. Harry Epperly, 1025 West Myrtle street.

Mrs. William Beadles and Mrs. Alfred C. Rush assisted Mrs. Epperly in receiving guests and in plans for the party, including the flowers which added charm to the home and the program of games and contests introduced. It seemed appropriate that the honor guest should score high in the contests, to be rewarded with first prize. Second prize went to Mrs. James A. Blackwell, and Mrs. Fitzgerald was consoling.

Guests had brought shower gifts in wide variety for Mrs. Beadles, and presentation of these prettily wrapped packages and the bride's enjoyment of her gifts provided entertainment in advance of the refreshment hour. The hostesses maintained the pink and white colors of their flower arrangements in serving refreshments.

Sharing the hospitality of Mrs. Epperly and her co-hostesses, Mrs. Beadles and Mrs. Rush, was their honor guest, Mrs. Archie Beadles, with Mesdames W. T. Marshall, Lloyd Watson, James H. Sixty guests, including visitors from neighboring Southland cities, were present yesterday for a luncheon at which members of Women's auxiliary to Santa Ana Typographical Union entertained at the home of Mrs. J. W. Jones, 1185 South Parton street.

Mrs. William Lawrence and Mrs. V. C. Shidder, retiring and new president of the auxiliary, greeted guests, inviting them to the garden where all was in readiness for serving luncheon.

Tables spread with orange crepe paper cloths were centered with vivid green flower pots, in which yellow and orange flowers and greenery were clustered about a tiny white trellis. So effective were the centerpieces, that several of them were purchased by guests.

THE TIMES

Story by HAL COCHRAN Artwork by GEORGE SCARBO

"Hey, just what is this all about," the Times heard we Duncy shout. "The pelicans have left us. We are in an awful plight."

"We should have stayed upon the ground instead of sailing all around. We will be lucky, this time, if this messtorm turns out all right."

Then Dotty snapped, "That's just like you. You never think we will pull through when we're in some predicament. I am not going to fret."

"The bird said we would have some fun, so please be patient, everyone! The shoreline is not far from here. We'll reach there soon, I'll bet."

"Of course we will," said Scouty.

STORIES IN STAMPS

TREASURE ISLAND

ALMOST annually, expeditions leave for a small, uninhabited island in the Pacific, 300 miles off Costa Rica, and dig for gold bullion and other treasures that pirates are supposed to have buried there between 200 and 300 years ago. It is Cocos Island, named so because of the great number of coconuts that grow wild there.

Here Spanish and Portuguese pirates, who looted the rich towns along the South American coast, are believed to have landed and left their riches before being captured. Here in recent years have come scores of expeditions. They have dug up the shore and inland even more completely than have the wild pigs that inhabit it. All, however, have returned empty-handed, and the secret of Cocos remains with it.

Early in 1936, Costa Rica issued a set of stamps, each showing a map of this island.

RELATIVES GUIDE the RADIO HEADLINERS

All of the microphone stars must have managers, and most of them have found that wife or brother or some other member of the family can handle this difficult task best

By Norman Siegel

MANAGING radio stars has become quite a family business. Husbands, wives, sisters, brothers, mothers and fathers are often the powers behind the microphone that keep a radio star in the spotlight.

Radio stars need managers. And many of them have found that their best business representatives are relatives (not particularly those who come around on pay day with a sob story for funds).

They need managers because they can't handle the hundreds of details that bob up in everyday radio, theater and movie work. It's seldom that business ability goes hand in hand with artistic talent. The rare exceptions are Eddie Cantor and Ed Wynn, who seem to be able to bargain as well as tell jokes.

The reason why many stars entrust the important duties of a manager to relatives is that it is obviously necessary to select somebody for the task who is earnestly interested in the star's progress; somebody, moreover, who can be implicitly trusted. And relatives come in handy that way.

These "go-between" creatures are very important to a performer. They handle bookings

Virginia Verrill (left) has put all of her affairs in the hands of her mother, known to the show business as Aimee McLean.

ster like you go ha-cha?"

Mrs. Verrill thought that was the end of that, but when Virginia was given the lead in her high school's annual musical show trouble started again. Soon afterwards she came home with the startling information that, unknown to her mother, she had applied at picture studios for work as a vocal double and had landed a job "dubbing in" for Barbara Stanwyck's songs in "Ten Cents a Dance."

That was more than enough to interest Mrs. Verrill in her daughter's possibilities as a singer.

Soon she was singing on Junior Chamber of Commerce radio programs over KHJ in Los Angeles. Then came a big break on the "California Melodies" program over the Columbia chain. M-G-M signed her and she sang a number in "Hideout." Later she was called to "dub in" for Jean Harlow in the picture, "Reckless."

During the summer she sang in Orville Knapp's band. And when Columbia brought her east last year, Mama Verrill came along as manager.

MONTENIESEN, without any experience in the theatrical world whatever, began to manage his daughter, Gertrude, soon after she established the fact that her voice could take her places. Previously a real estate operator, he now is one of the shrewdest and most efficient managers in the business.

Monte was worrying over the real estate business when his daughter first began to think about going professional. He thought it a lot of nonsense when she first told him about her singing plans. Of course Gertrude had a nice voice. She'd always been in demand to sing at parties. But go on the stage? Impossible.

Then came the day that Gertrude thumbed through a telephone book, noted the address of the first theatrical agent she came across, put on her most glamorous outfit and headed for Broadway. She bluffed her way through the interview with the agent and was almost floored when he asked her for a sample of her singing. Somehow she managed to carol, "I Got a Cousin From Milwaukee." The agent nodded and said he'd call her. In two weeks he did call and offered her a spot on a vaudeville bill that paid $100 a week. Gertrude scored and immediately was signed to sing in the "300" Club.

That was when she came home and asked her father's advice on business matters. Little by little, by giving advice and overseeing business details for Gertrude, Monte found it a full-time job managing his daughter's affairs in the entertainment world.

Her engagement to the "300" was followed by a featured role in a J. C. Flippen vaudeville revue. In January, 1933, she auditioned at Columbia and now is one of the network's most exotic blues singers. However, Monte Niesen isn't singing any blues these days.

MRS. TITO GUIZAR (Nanette) is her husband's manager. She, too, was worked into the job almost unintentionally at the start.

Nanette met Tito when he was dancing and singing in Mexico City. He was then branching off from an operatic career and attempting to learn the more popular type of song. Nanette Noviega taught him many numbers and encouraged him in his new career. The tutor wound up marrying the pupil and they started to New York.

In Manhattan she proved of invaluable aid to her husband, as he did not speak English very well and she did. She went along to business appointments as his interpreter and offered as much sound advice as exact interpretations.

Dark-haired, dark-eyed and vivacious, pretty Nanette Guizar does not look the part of the cold, calculating manager. In fact, she isn't. She is utterly enthusiastic about the Mexican singer and is honest in getting the best that can be had for her husband.

WITH Connie Boswell's recent marriage to Harry Leedy, management of the famous radio trio is now completely in the family. The sisters first met Harry in Los Angeles in 1931. Up to that time Connie had been manager, and a shrewd one. They were then just starting in radio and decided to put their future in the hands of Harry Leedy. His first move was to send them to San Francisco where, due to network broadcasts, they received bids to come to New York.

Now Harry is devoting all of his time to Connie, both as manager and husband. She is soloing on Columbia with Ray Noble's orchestra. Martha and Vet are out of the radio picture temporarily, Vet being down south with her new husband, John Paul Jones, an oil engineer, and Martha just back from a honeymoon with her new husband, Major Lloyd.

Up to the time Harry took over the managerial reins, Connie's leadership and careful management laid the ground work for one of the biggest successes a radio trio had ever known. For instance, she insisted that they live on but a fraction of their salaries so that when they finally did invade New York to seek stardom they could be more independent.

and public engagements, act as program advisers, work to increase the value of the artist's services and in general are critics and promoters.

Probably the best known of the relative managers is Olive White, wife of the popular Lanny Ross. Their marriage last year was the outgrowth of their business association. Miss White, or Mrs. Ross, brought Lanny from comparative obscurity to fame on the air. Before their marriage she represented a number of artists. Now, Lanny is her sole client.

Bing Crosby's brother, Everett, handles his affairs. Ben Bernie also uses his brother, Herman, for a manager. The H. Bernie, however, is the head of a booking agency and handles many other performers in addition to his "Yowsah" brother.

Jessica Dragonette's business affairs are taken care of by her sister, Mrs. Nan Loftus. Irene Wicker, the air waves "Singing Lady," is managed by her husband, Walter. Don Ross, a capable performer himself, handles all of the business details in the life of his wife, the lovely Jane Froman. And if you want to talk to Dorothy Martin Parker, his wife. Yes, girls, Frankie is married.

VIRGINIA VERRILL, 18-year-old singer from the coast who is starting to go places in radio, is managed by her mother, Mrs. Addison E. Verrill, better known as Aimee McLean in the show business.

Although Aimee McLean (who looks more like Virginia's sister than her mother) had been publicity director for Pantages on the west coast and discovered and managed many a performer to fame, such as Claire Windsor, she was loathe to manage her daughter. In her frank opinion, Virginia couldn't sing. But daughter convinced mother otherwise and they're both doing very well now—thank you for listening.

Mrs. Verrill really gave Virginia her first break when the singer was but three years old. Aimee was playing at the Palace in New York with a band billed as "Aimee McLean and her Jazzsters." One evening she took the tiny youngster to the theater with her. Paul Whiteman also happened to be on the bill that week. The "King of Jazz" greeted Aimee and her youngster heartily and, winking, asked little Virginia if she could sing like her mother.

Much to Aimee's surprise, Virginia spoke right up and said she could sing "I Never Knew I Could Love Anybody." She had picked up the tune listening to her mother's act from the wings. Whiteman took the youngster out on the stage and put her on the bandstand.

To the accompaniment of his famous musical aggregation she sang the tune in her not-too-sure childish voice. It got a big hand from the audience. But that was all the public singing she did until she was 13.

A few years before, Mrs. Verrill had bought her daughter a violin and started her on an instrumental career. But Virginia hated the fiddle. She wanted to sing. Her mother pooh-poohed the idea. "You have a deep voice," she told Virginia. "Only Sophie Tucker can get away with deep-voiced stuff. And how can a young-

NEEDED TAX REDUCTION

After all this is still a government with the consent of the governed. The voters can make a change when they tire of that bad exorcism which California holds by having the highest per capita tax of any state in the Union. Politicians ever follow, fast and furious, after public opinion, hoping to get in front and thereafter rate as leaders. It becomes increasingly evident, that whether or not all our governmental agencies and services are good, we have more government than we can afford. Knowledge in the people, a willingness to relinquish dispensable service and arouse public opinion alone will result in tax reduction.

MODEL PRISON PLAN

Kentucky may in time become the "model prison" state, if plans approved by federal and state officials are carried out successfully.

A $14,000,000, 10-year program is contemplated, to provide for an entirely new approach to the whole vital problem of prisons and charitable institutions. The keystone of the project would be rehabilitation. Treatment of each prisoner would be prescribed with a view to "salvaging" the individual for society.

The vast project encompasses plans to classify inmates as dangerous, less dangerous, and tractable. Separate wards would be provided for each class, and useful work found for those eligible.

The plan, Kentucky officials claim, is a major step away from the existing "universities of crime." It will be interesting to see just how it works out.

THE PUBLIC BE INFORMED!

The old question of just how much the public is entitled to know about the public's business has at last caught up with the right answer in Michigan.

The answer came decisively from Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald after the Michigan State Prison Commission decided to bar newspapermen from its sessions.

Governor Fitzgerald sat on that plan with a thump. He held that, in effect, newspapermen are liaison officers between the public and its government and that, therefore, they must be admitted to all meetings of all state commissions.

There is no excuse for conducting any of the state's business in the dark, Fitzgerald pointed out.

Thus the Michigan governor sounded the keynote of good government. The salutary effect of conducting all public business where it should be conducted, in public, cannot be overestimated.

RELIEF, FEDERAL OR LOCAL?

Whether relief should be administered by the federal government or state and local authorities, will be debated Wednesday night at the Public Forum, held at the Unitarian church, corner Eighth and Bush at 7:30 o'clock.

While we have relief problems so prominently before us, this is a practical problem and not a theory and public opinion will eventually have to determine which way we want the problem handled.

Terrance Halloran, local director of state relief administration, will present the side contending that federal authorities should administer relief; Howard Wood, secretary of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce, will present the theory that local and state authorities should administer relief.

The public will, of course, be given an opportunity to enter into the discussion, as they have in the past. Those who are not clear on the subject or who have ideas on the subject, will undoubtedly enjoy the meeting.

IS SELFISHNESS NECESSARY?

Whether or not selfishness is necessary all depends upon the definition of selfishness. If, by selfishness is meant the desire to secure enough to develop the individual's life, health and mentality, then selfishness is absolutely necessary. If people did not have this desire, then human life would become extinct and it would have to be evolved again. So, a certain kind of selfishness is absolutely necessary in order to preserve the species.

On the other hand, if selfishness means the right to consume what others produce permanently and an unwillingness to contribute in some form or another the equivalent of what we consume, then selfishness is something that society should try to eliminate as much as possible.

So do not condemn selfishness in an individual when he is only trying to get things that will develop him physically and mentally and he gives in exchange equal value for what he is getting.

If there were no desire for life and no desire of an individual to stamp his personality on the world, there would be no life.

WEALTH EQUALLY DIVIDED

The great majority of the people believe that unemployment is due to too much wealth being in the hands of the few and too little wealth in the hands of the many. We would guess that 90 per cent of the people believe in this philosophy. It is largely shared by college professors.

If we could magically re-divide all wealth and give every citizen an equal amount of this world's wealth, then, so long as this equal division lasted, everyone who worked would probably employ himself. The great majority, however, would produce little so long as they had a visible means of support and a few meals ahead. There would probably not be nearly so much hiring of other people to do work so long as capital was nearly equally divided, as there is when it is divided so unequally.

It is often said that if wealth was equally divided, it would soon be back in the same hands. If this statement were true, the equal division of wealth by taxation or any other method, would not at all be serious, but this is not true because the great majority of people would consume the wealth and the country that divided it by taxation or otherwise would be infinitely poorer than it was before the division.

Since the beginning of time, wealth has been unequally divided and it never has been the cause of unemployment.

Changing the value of money and permitting people to acquire wealth by holding money (which is really due bills for wealth) by securing their wealth when money prices were high and then converting it into due bills and, thus, paralyzing the natural division of labor is one of the primary causes of unemployment.

Another, of course, is the arbitrary and unnatural division of labor and profits, permitting some groups to take such a large share of the total production for working part time (thus cutting down their production) and leaving a very small fraction of the total production for the remaining workers. This taking of a large fraction of the total production includes, of course, all government employees who are receiving more for the services they render than private citizens are able to receive on a competitive basis. We had better look for places like these for unemployment than to the wish that there is plenty in the country if it is only divided more evenly.

BLACK ROBBERS

About this time every year thousands upon thousands of black robbers come to town to steal everything they can lay their hands to. These robbers, of course, are the raucous but thoroughly enchanting blackbirds—so common around here that they attract little notice.

The dusky rascals of the air have become so much a part of our life that few of us humans take heed of them. Our canine friends, however, are keenly aware of the black pirates that swoop down to beat their wings and peck at a once-proud dog.

They're funny birds, at that. Boastful, cocky, belligerent and conceited, at the same time they are wary and alert, less danger strike unawares. Noticed them really for the first time the other day in the back yard. A flock of the dark scoundrels glided down to see what they could see, and lo and behold, they found a veritable treasure chest—That is from the standpoint of that kind of bird.

The treasure was displayed in the romantic and intriguing baking pan used by the family Collie for his evening dinner and such extra snacks as the family table could supply. It consisted of two pieces of left-over French toast, which the dog had disdained but which was plenty fine food for the air-minded pirates.

And such a time they had over the pieces of toast! Attacking and retreating—inviting other birds to share their delicious luncheon and then shouting them off with fluffed breast feathers and meaningful pecks backed by dirty looks. They even rob themselves. If one dropped a particularly luscious crumb, another bird would follow until the first one dropped to better pick it to pieces. Then the second would snare the tidbit with a swift and comic lunge, cackling gleefully at his prank.

Such utter scamps as these noisy birds seem to run the bird world in their size class, for while many other types of birds came to partake of the feast, one and only one ventured to assume the character of an uninvited guest, and woe was unto him! The blackbirds allowed this gray intruder to stand around for a while. Then, emboldened by his apparent welcome, the gray one started to eat. Then the riot started! One of the blackbirds swelled out his chest, let out a war cry and let the gray one have it on the beak. The gray one was made of pretty good stuff, and came back for more. He never got a nibble.

In the meantime, the proud and handsome Collie dog who had tilted his exceedingly long and pointed nose about a foot higher in the air than usual when offered the "nice French toast," came around to see what was going on. A fine reception he got! Yes, indeed! Chased right out of his own back yard by a flock of whirling black midgits with gleaming eyes, making horrible noises and coming altogether too close for comfort.

A fine state of affairs for a high-class dog who is brave enough every week to attack the rumbling menace of the garbage truck. A fine thing. But there it was, proving what? That might is right? Nope, that sheer nerve and audacity, coupled with fierce noises and sudden attack brings home the bacon many a time. These black robbers that are everywhere around Santa Ana today are mighty interesting little critters. Go out and watch them for a time if you've nothing else to do. You'll learn a lot and enjoy yourself at the same time. Believe me!

Day By Day In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 26.—As the time for the conventions approaches, more and more talk is being heard about making the Cleveland gathering a truly Republican-Democratic coalition.

To do it, these steps are being suggested:

First, the adoption of a resolution pledging the candidate to carry out those planks of the Democratic platform of 1932 which have been repudiated by the New Deal party. Such a resolution would be apart from the adoption of a new platform of affirmative pledges with respect to problems that have arisen since 1932.

Second, the selection of a Democrat for the vice presidency.

Third, a resolution pledging the parties' candidate for the presidency to appoint a coalition cabinet consisting of Democrats as well as Republicans.

If the Republican leaders are truly interested in gathering into their camp the large number of anti-New Deal Democrats, so many of whom dislike to vote the Republican ticket as such, then a program for coalition would seem likely to be considered. If the Republican command, on the other hand, thinks the party can win without the Democrats, the convention will probably repeat the empty gesture made by the Republican committee last winter about inviting Democrats to vote the ticket and let it go at that.

But there are many Republicans who think a crisis faces the party. In fact, that it is on trial and that a severe defeat in the forthcoming election may mean the fate of the old Whig party which died in 1860.

As a matter of fact, there is a curious historic parallel in the mention of the Civil War situation, and oddly enough it concerns Henry Breckenridge, who recently made a gallant fight in the primaries of four states and who now is being mentioned as a possibility for the vice presidential nomination at the Cleveland convention.

Henry Breckenridge's grandfather, Robert J. Breckenridge, was the leader of the Union cause in Kentucky. Though a Democrat, he was chosen chairman of the convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln in 1864. He was insistent that the convention not be called a Republican convention because it might not attract Democrats by what was called the Union or National Union convention. Also, on demand of Robert Breckenridge and border state Whigs and Democrats, Andrew Johnson, a Tennessee Democrat, was nominated for the vice presidency as the running mate of Abraham Lincoln.

It would be a curious turn of history if the same trade happened this year with respect to the grandson of Robert Breckenridge, namely if the Cleveland convention styled itself a coalition convention and named a Democrat for the vice presidency.

If Governor Landon is the nominee and makes only a front porch campaign, it may be even more important from his standpoint to have a man of the Breckenridge type for his running mate. Breckenridge is a splendid campaigner and remarkable orator. He inherits the fighting qualities of his ancestors, one of whom—his great-grandfather—was attorney general in the cabinet of Thomas Jefferson and another of whom was vice president of the United States under President Buchanan in 1860 and later joined the Confederacy.

Colonel Breckenridge is a graduate of the class of 1907 of Princeton university and while there attracted the attention of Woodrow Wilson who later made him Assistant Secretary of War. In 1918, Colonel Breckenridge was at the western front with the infantry and on his return practiced law. He has been interested also in the aviation business and has been the personal attorney for Colonel Lindbergh, who doubtless would not hesitate to campaign for Breckenridge if the latter were nominated for the vice presidency on a coalition ticket. Lindbergh's support undoubtedly would be pointed because he made the first protest against that sudden cancellation of the airman's contracts which resulted in the death of several army pilots in an abortive attempt to substitute an untrained personnel for airmen in the middle of winter—a blunder that has not been forgotten and will be recalled in the campaign this year, especially since it looks as if Postmaster General Farley is going to be an object of some controversy, politically speaking.

There is also some talk of nominating Lewis Douglas for the vice presidency. He, too, is a Democrat who has repudiated the New Deal. Mr. Douglas was a member of Congress from Arizona before he became director of the budget. The friends of Breckenridge are pointing out that he has tested fire in the primaries in four states and that his vigor as a campaigner ought to make him first choice on that account.

But matters such as these are decided by a group of Republican chieftains who have their own ideas about the vice presidency, and there are, of course, many Republicans with eyes on the place. It could happen that a Democrat would be selected for the vice presidential nomination, but the chances are very much against it because the Cleveland convention is composed of regular Republicans who care more about party habits than they do about extraordinary situations. But if they really need a precedent, they will find that Lincoln did it in 1864 in the very first years of the Republican party's long period of national supremacy.

Me and Puds Simkins was wawking along just wawking along and I said, G, look what some lady must of just dropped.

Meaning a little blue hankkerhiff with black marks on it where people had stepped on it going passed, and Puds said, It must belong to one of those 2 ladies because they're the only ones in site.

Meaning 2 ladies away up the other end of the block and still going, and I said, Let's run after them and ask them. We'll each ask one, and whoever asks the one that dropped it will get the reward in case she offers one. I'll ask the one on the outside, I said.

I'll ask the one on the inside, Puds said.

Seeing the only one left, and we ran after them all our mite and cawt up to them, saying, Hay lady, hay lady.

Me meaning the one on the outside and Puds meaning the one on the inside, and they stopped tawking and looked around, and I stuck the hankkerhiff up at the one on the outside, saying, Does this belong to you?

Well of all things, how dare you ask me if I own such a disreputable disliking looking object? the lady on the outside said.

Meaning no, and Puds grabbed the hankkerhiff and poked it at the lady on the inside, saying, Is it yours, lady?

Take that away from me or I'll give you a smack, the lady on the inside said.

Proving it wasn't hers either, and they both kept on going, the outside lady being the tallest and the inside lady being the fattest, and I said, Well, hay, I got another idea, let's both take it home and try to sell it to our mother, and no matter which one buys it we'll divide the profits equal.

The result being my mother took it with a pair of tweezers and dropped it out the front window, and Puds mother burnt it alive.

Porfirio Diaz who for more than a quarter century has held the reins of Mexican government, yesterday resigned from the presidency. News of his abdication was signaled by the ringing of cathedral bells in Mexico City. Señor de la Barra, minister of foreign affairs, was chosen provisional president.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THE PROBLEM OF SOCIAL CHANGE

Mr. Roosevelt has attempted to bring institutional change about by social change, to make changes in government to meet the changes that have already taken place in the life and enterprise government must govern.

To do this is of the essence of statesmanship.

The question now to be fought out is not the wisdom or folly of keeping institutional change about of social change.

That is—or should be—a settled question. Any political opposition that seeks to stop a progressive adaptation of the tools of government to the tasks of government is doomed to defeat—and should be defeated.

The question now to be fought out is the wisdom or folly of the specific institutional changes Mr. Roosevelt has sought to bring about.

Some of these attempted changes have been declared unconstitutional.

NRA is out.

AAA has gone the way of all flesh.

The Guffey Coal Bill has gone to the boneyard.

Still other New Deal measures will doubtless feel the ax of judicial disapproval.

The reaction of both the New Dealers and the Opposition is of critical importance to the national future. It is to be hoped that the result will not be a rebellion against the Supreme Court. The Court, it seems to me, has but discharged its manifest responsibility. The Court must measure legislation by the yardstick of the Constitution. Even if some measure, which is technically violative of the Constitution, is a useful measure! There may well be room for amendments to the Constitution that will enable us to secure concerted national action, where such action is desirable, without knocking down the Constitutional safeguards against undue and irresponsible centralization of power.

Mr. Roosevelt should renounce all attempts to achieve his ends by unconstitutional means, bending his ingenuity to the drafting of such clear and unambiguous amendments to the Constitution as will make possible his projected program, and then go frankly to the electorate with his proposals.

The Opposition should face frankly the problems of keeping the tools of government adjusted to the changing tasks of government and present its alternative program clearly and unambiguously.

Both sides owe a debt of candor to the people.

OUR CHILDREN

WHY TEACHERS ARE QUEER

"Practice telling funny stories to each other. It will improve your composition, brighten you up. A good laugh is a great help in many ways. And be good listeners, too. Remember the audience is always part of the entertainment."

The class filed out for noon recess, and Miss Lavinia, rather pleased with her morning's work, followed. She would eat her lunch at once as she was on duty for the last half hour in the playground. During this time she could correct those spelling papers and get them back in time for evening home work.

Half past twelve found Miss Lavinia in the yard, correcting papers. A few scattered children were about the yard. More would be in presently, and Miss Lavinia sought the quiet corner under the stairs. Zip, zip, her expert pencil checked and lined the words. By and by she became conscious of a noise over on her left.

"Yeah? What's funny about a man falling out of a tree and hurting himself?"

"I didn't say he hurt himself, did I? I told you he sawed off his leg. He was standing on and fell head over heels."

"And is that funny? A man fractures his skull, and breaks his arms and legs, maybe, and has even a wife and children, and you think it's funny that he falls out of the tree when he is working hard, I think it's a dumb story."

"It is not. Can't you see? The thing that is funny is that he stands on the limb and cuts it off."

"He wouldn't be so dumb. He would stand on the end that he didn't cut off."

"You make me sick. I'm telling you a funny story like the teacher said, and you stand there with an argument. Listen. Pat was told to climb up and cut—"

"You don't need to say it again. I'm not going to laugh. I'm not so dumb as to think it is funny when a man falls down and gets himself killed."

"You're dumb, I—"

"That goes for you. You're dumb—"

The yard echoed to their shouts now and Miss Lavinia, tried beyond her patience, shouted them down. "Stop that noise. What is the matter with the pair of you, anyway?"

"I tried to tell him a funny story like you said and—"

"Is it funny, teacher, if a man falls down and kills himself nearly? Out of a tree that he cuts down a limb off?"

"Certainly not."

"I didn't say that—"

"You did, too. You did so. You know you did."

"Johnson, go out of that door on the right. You, Morris, go out the other side. Don't speak to each other again today. You hear?" And as the two close friends vanished at opposite ends of the yard she sighed. "And to think I thought they might cultivate a little sense of humor."

PARAGRAPHS

By Robert Quillen

Karpis isn't the only one to blame for his crimes. Two authorities paroled him.

The old wood stove had disadvantages, but nobody shut off the wood for repairs when every woman in town was cooking dinner. Eating breakfast in bed sounds luxurious, but how can anybody eat before washing his teeth?

Twin beds are better. It's awful to lie in crumbs if you didn't eat the crackers.

It's no wonder that people are increasingly resentful of old age. It's another thing that makes them slow up.

NOW SCIENCE TELLS US THAT WE ABSORB NUTRIMENT THROUGH THE SKIN. THE DIRT ON WILDLIE SHOULD BE GOOD RICH SOIL.

Mightn't it be right, but who cares what a statesman says if his country has no fighting force?

The League of Nations has shown that sanctions are useful. They make the victim mad enough to go ahead and win.

The unspoken part of all diplomacy: "If you don't trade my way, I'll have my boys kill a lot of your boys."

NOTE TO ITALY: Don't let victory fool you. Carrera always looked pretty good when he had a set-up.

Revolutionists say: "We demand what is best for man." Then they win and say: "Now what is best for the State?"

Now if Mussolini wishes to civilize the savage Ethiopians, let him give them a reservation with oil under it.

THERE WAS LESS HEART FAILURE IN THE OLD DAYS. MEN OF FIFTY DIDN'T THINK EXERCISE WOULD MAKE THEM YOUNG AGAIN.

Illiterates: People who can't read the fine literature which they wouldn't read if they knew how.

Anyway the depression taught us that a car's working parts aren't worn out merely because the fenders are dented.

Wheat is a wonderful grain. When the nutritious part is removed for the hors, there is still enough pretty white flour to feed man.

Slicing the bread is a great help, but still there is work to be done. Can't the bakers invent a pre-chewing machine?

CORRECT THIS SENTENCE: "I SHALL GIVE THEM A FINE EDUCATION," SAID THE PARENT, "AND THAT WILL MAKE THEM HAPPY AND GOOD."
